Bruce Tarver Killed In Auto Crash Near Palo Alto

COMPANIONS IN CAR ALSO LOSE LIVES

Santa Ana Youth Vice President of Student Body at Stanford University

MANY INJURED HERE

Newman, Calif., Girl Killed Near Doheny Park; Orange Man Killed in L. A.

BRUCE TARVER, 21, prominent Santa Ana senior and student vice president at Stanford University, was killed in a crash near the campus at Palo Alto, a young woman from Newman, California, was killed on the state highway at Doheny Park, an Orange Japanese man was killed in Los Angeles and 13 persons were injured in wrecks over the week end.

Bruce Tarver

Tarver, substitute guard on Stanford football team, died six hours after a terrific headon collision of two cars on the Bay Shore highway near Burlingame at 3:15 yesterday morning, in which two of his companions and the driver of the other car were also killed. He and his friends were returning from a "big game" celebration following Stanford's football victory over California.

Those killed besides Tarver were Gladys McClure, 18, Los Angeles, sister of Adrienne Ames, film star; Miss Dorothy Karr, 18, freshman at Stanford and daughter of Judge Frank Karr, chief counsel of the Pacific Electric company of Los Angeles; and Al Racey, 28, San Francisco, salesman, driver of the second machine. The car in which the students were riding, was driven by Donn B. Tatum, Los Angeles, senior student at Stanford, who may face manslaughter charges.

Many Injured

The list of injured in the crash included Tatum, S. G. Francis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clotere, Ruth Stewart, Maxine Tallmann and Elton Smith, all San Francisco residents and occupants of Racey's machine. None of them are in a serious condition at Mills Memorial hospital, except Tatum, who suffered internal injuries and a possible fractured skull.

The collision occurred near a dangerous curve about one and one-half miles north of Burlingame. Skid marks indicated the cars crashed directly in the middle of the highway. Both cars were demolished and the Racey machine burst in flames. Miss Karr and Miss McClure were pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital. Tatum was driving south and Racey north after each had attended football parties.

Tarver was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben E. Tarver, 2510 Valencia avenue, and graduated from Santa Ana high school in 1930. He was captain of the varsity football team and played football and basketball throughout his high school career. He was voted the most popular man in school during his senior year, was prominent in many activities, and held offices of honor society president, senior class president, student body vice president, junior class president, yearbook sports editor

VICTIMS OF LYNCHING AND GATHERING OF MOB AT JAIL

At left is Jack Holmes and at extreme right Thomas J. Thurmond, kidnapers of Brooke Hart, jr., San Jose youth, who were lynched by a mob of 15,000 persons in the city park across from the county jail at San Jose last night. The two were dragged from jail, beaten and kicked and then hanged from trees. In the center is shown the mob battering down the doors of the Santa Clara county jail. The men worked amid a cloud of tear gas and hails of bricks, stones and other missiles. This graphic photo was taken by a NEA camera man who narrowly escaped with his life from flying missiles. STOCKYARDS IN CHICAGO TIED UP BY STRIKE

Work in Packing Plants is Brought to Sudden Halt as Men Quit Work

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Striking stock handlers today brought operations at the largest livestock center in the world to a sudden halt.

Work at the gigantic Chicago packing plants proceeded temporarily but will be brought to a standstill soon unless the dispute is quickly settled.

The scene at the Union Stockyards was one of terrific confusion as a handful of men sought to unload hundreds of truckloads of cattle, pigs and sheep that arrived at the yards overnight.

Pickets jammed the streets surrounding the packing plants urging all workers to walk out. Police patrolled the area, fearful of discord. Several sluggings were reported.

First men to walk out on strike were members of the Stockhandlers' Union. Comparatively small in numbers, this union succeeded in tying up operations since these men unload and handle all stock entering the yards.

Approximately 5000 other yards and packing workers also voted to walk out. Their membership included the Amalgamated Meat Cutters' and Butchers' union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate as is the Stockhhandlers' group.

Nearly 6000 men in all are affected by the strike order.

Quick action was being taken by Union Stockyard officials to solve the tangle. Receipts today were heavy. Sixteen thousand cattle, 40,000 hogs and 17,000 sheep arrived. Emergency workers were able to unload only a few hundred cattle.

Representatives of Armour & Co., Swift & Co., and the Cudahy Packing Co., the "big three" packers at the yards, viewed the strike with apprehension. They reported little effect upon their operations and announced supplies on hand were so large that even a continued strike would have little effect on their business.

MOLEY OPPOSED TO FIGHT ON PRESIDENT

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP)—Prof. Raymond T. Moley, former assistant secretary of state, today deplored the "united attack" on President Roosevelt's monetary policy, and intimated the matter was too complicated to be safely entrusted to popular sentiment.

"The issue cannot be decided by referendum of the people," Moley said. "It requires careful and intelligent reasoning. I am in favor of a reasonable adjustment.

"There is obvious evidence of an unified attack on the president's plans in regard to the monetary system.

Boys Use Air Rifles In Friendly Duel

FRESNO, Nov. 27.—(UP)—A duel with air rifles at 20 paces today left a 13-year-old Fresno boy with a gashed forehead and the memory of a blistering lecture by a deputy sheriff.

John Sinclair, 12, and William Fail, 13, faced each other in a "friendly duel," they told Deputy John Ford. Sinclair fired, hitting William in the forehead. Sinclair and the "seconds" took him to an emergency hospital to have the wound dressed.

Ford reprimanded them and sent them home.

MILLIONAIRES PASS WORDS IN SENATE PROBE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(UP) A passage-at-words between two of this country's tremendously wealthy men today diverted senate stock market investigation of the Chase National bank when Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, objected to interruptions of testimony by Chairman Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National bank.

Couzens said he "resented" Aldrich's interruptions, reminding the head of the world's largest bank that he had been told before that he could not dictate investigation procedure to the committee.

The dispute came when Couzens sought to comment on the fact that Fox Film, Inc., and its affiliated companies paid $5,560,304.84 dividends in 1931 when the companies actually lost $4,104,035. Hermann Place, vice president of Chase National had just testified that most of the dividend went to Harley L. Clarke's General The-

SAN DIEGO MEN TO FACE FEDERAL JURY

TUCSON, Ariz., Nov. 27.—(UP)—Five San Diego financiers were to go on trial in federal court here today on charges of using the mails to defraud.

Those named as defendants were Jesse H. Shreve, Archie C. Shreve, and Daniel H. Shreve, brothers, W. C. Evans and J. G. Cash. Similar charges were made against Glenn O. Perkins of Phoenix and Tucson, and the six are to be tried jointly.

Most of the testimony is expected to be concerning operations of the Arizona Holding corporation, Security Building and Loan association, Tucson, Century Investment Trust, Phoenix, Security Building and Loan association, Phoenix.

"THEY DID GOOD JOB" SAYS GOVERNOR AFTER READING OF LYNCHING OF TWO KIDNAPERS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP)—"They did a good job," Governor Rolph said today as he recieved newspaper stories of the lynching in San Jose of the confessed kidnapers and slayers of Brooke Hart.

"I don't think anyone will be arrested down there, but if they are I'll pardon them," he added.

"There'll be less kidnaping in the country as a result of this. It was the only way to give a lesson to the country," Governor Rolph continued.

"It's about time the people in their homes have a little peace and comfort. It's gotten so bad since the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby that mothers are afraid to let their children go outside their homes to play.

"With such a condition it is only natural that people will take the law in their own hands. After all, the people make the laws. I think this will serve as a lesson in every state in the union."

The governor expressed the opinion that his assurance he would not call out troops gave the people courage "to protect themselves."

Having planned to leave for Boise, Idaho, last night the governor said today that he "didn't dare leave the state because someone might have called out the troops."

"As it was," he added, "there was no loss of life with the exception of the two men hanged."

All kidnapers held in Folsom and San Quentin prison should be paroled to the people of San Jose for proper treatment, Rolph said.

"I am thinking of paroling any kidnapers to those fine patriotic citizens of San Jose who know how to handle the situation," he said. "Parole Officer Ed Whyte is much too busy at it is."

Rolph determined that two kidnapers are in Folsom prison. They are Joseph P. Baillie, 50, and Earl H. Van Dorn, both from Los Angeles. Baillie is serving a life term for kidnaping, extortion and robbery and Van Dorn was sentenced to serve ten years for kidnaping and extortion.

Rolph admitted that he probably could not parole the men to the citizens of San Jose, but he said he thought it would be a fine idea.

"No convicted kidnaper will ever be turned free or pardoned while I'm governor," Rolph continued. "We've got to protect our homes against this terrible evil.

Potential kidnapers should have fear in their hearts when they know they would not be safe in this state, even if they were placed in the penitentiaries."

Rolph's attitude toward kidnapers was exactly the opposite his usual stand taken in connection with doomed criminals. He does all possible to save a man from hanging, and is opposed to capital punishment except in extreme cases."

S. F. CHAMBER WARS ON WATER PROGRAM

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27. —(UP)—The San Francisco chamber of commerce today announced its opposition to the $170,000,000 Central Valley Water project because of the cost of the plan.

"We are informed by competent engineering advice that these water problems can be solved by works whose cost would not exceed approximately one-third of that amount," a statement by the chamber said.

"In solving a serious water problem it would be indefensible extravagance to undertake a project that would cost three times as much as is necessary."

The water project will be submitted to the state voters at a special election Dec. 19.

RIOTING REPORTED IN SANTIAGO, CUBA

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Nov. 27. —(UP)—A riot, accompanied by shooting, broke out during exercises today commemorating the death of the student martyrs of 1871, and military forces were called out to disperse the antagonistic groups. Several persons were reported wounded.

11,000 UNION MEN RETURNED TO WORK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(UP)—The NRA and civil works program were credited today with having reversed the seasonal trend of slack fall employment.

The monthly employment report of the American Federation of Labor showed 11,000 more on payrolls at the end of October than were working at the start of the month, in contrast to the usual laying off of nearly half a million men during that period.

President William Green said the total buying power of workers increased 2.2 per cent during October, raising workers' total income to $600,000,000 above the March low.

TWO BOARDS ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(UP)—The White House today announced personnel of two emergency boards created by the president to investigate labor disputes on the Southern Pacific and the Mobile and Ohio railroads.

The boards were created by the president after the railway board of mediation had reported its inability to adjust the disputes. The emergency boards are directed to investigate the controversies and to report to the president within 30 days. On the basis of these findings the president has power under the railway labor act to enforce any decisions he finds equitable.

Mrs. Wynekoop Repudiates Her Confession

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Frank Tyrell, attorney for Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop, said today that his client had repudiated her "confession."

"I did not shoot Theta," Dr. Wynekoop was quoted by her attorney as declaring after an interview at the county jail where the physician is held on a charge of murder in connection with her daughter-in-law's death.

"Police put those words in my mouth," Dr. Wynekoop said.

700 MILLIONS IN GOVERNMENT BONDS MATURE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Fresh from a week end visit with President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., Henry L. Morgenthau, acting secretary of the treasury, returned today to tackle the troublesome problem of refinancing $727,682,500 government securities which mature December 15.

The method of clearing this hurdle of government debt was expected to be worked out by Morgenthau this week in collaboration with his new aides, Tom K. Smith, president of the Boatmen's National bank of St. Louis, and Earle Baillie of New York.

A substantial rally in government securities last week, in the absence of federal reserve support, but aided by treasury purchasing, was expected to lead to a decision to refund the maturing obligations with a new issue in the regular manner. Although the government bond market is lower than it was during the summer, the treasury was expected to have little difficulty in floating a new issue. It was possible that a slightly higher interest rate would have to be offered.

KENTUCKY RATIFIES REPEAL OF DRY LAW

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 27. —(UP)—Kentucky today became the thirty-third state to ratify formally the 21st amendment to the constitution of the United States, repealing the national prohibition amendment.

Nineteen prominent Kentuckians assembled at the capitol here to fulfill the formality of ratification.

Pennsylvania, Ohio and Utah also voted wet at the November 7 election, and will hold their ratification conventions December 5, thus completing the legal process by which the eighteenth amendment is erased from the nation's constitution.

PAIR TAKEN FROM CELLS AND HANGED

Finding of Youth's Body in Bay Waters Incites Crowd of 5000 Citizens

SHERIFF BADLY HURT

Reinforcements From San Francisco Arrive Too Late to Halt Lynching

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP)—Led by a boy in his teens, a mob of 5000 enraged citizens stormed the county jail here last night, seized Thomas Thurmond and John Holmes, confessed kidnap-slayers of Brooke Hart, 22, dragged them to St. James park, and hanged them from elm trees.

Thurmond was unconscious and probably dead when the rope was placed around his neck. He had been beaten and kicked senseless. Willing hands jerked his body into the air as the mob cheered. Holmes was naked. His clothing had been torn from him. He screamed for mercy.

"You've got the wrong man," he cried. "I'm Joe Pierce." A moment later his body dangled grotesquely from another elm a few yards from where Thurmond was lynched and in the shadow of a monument to President McKinley. He kicked convulsively and was still.

Men, boys and a sprinkling of women composed the mob. Many fainted and were trampled. Others screamed hysterically and fled. Others wept. Some laughed crazily. Some faces were flushed with a lust for vengeance. Others were deathly white.

The pent up emotion of an enraged city had burst its bounds, legal justice had been too slow. It was enough for the mob that Thurmond and Holmes had confessed. They decided on quick justice. The city had seethed since Nov. 16 when Thurmond was arrested. He was calling the palatial Hart home here demanding $40,000 ransom when he was captured. He confessed that Hart was dead and implicated Holmes. They had thrown the boys wire-trussed body off San Mateo bridge into San Francisco bay. Search for the body was begun. Two duck hunters found it Sunday.

That was the spark that ignited the mob.

Crowd Assembles

It began assembling immediately. All day long it milled around the old weather-beaten jail. It steadily increased in size. Sheriff William Emig called in 50 officers. Streets to the jail were barricaded. The big steel doors of the jail were re-inforced. Tear gas bombs and rifles were issued. Thurmond was locked in a remote cell on the third floor. Holmes was placed on the second floor.

By 9:30 p. m. 4000 shouting citizens were milling around the jail. Emig was desperate. He called Oakland and San Francisco police for reinforcements. But they were too late. A boy, not more than 16, climbed to the top of a shed and shouted in a shrill voice, "Come on fellows. Let's go get 'em."

This was the leader the mob had been waiting for.

The surge of men and boys and a few women carried to the barriers Sheriff Emig's men had erected. They were swept aside. Tear bombs

LEADER OF MOB RELATES STORY OF LYNCHINGS

Ranch Boy 18 Years of Age Recruits Mob From Speakeasies

BY ANTHONY CATALBI

(Copyright, 1933, by United Press)

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP)—I was the first one of the gang to break into the jail.

I came to town in the afternoon and saw the crowd around the jail and heard that Brooke Hart's body had been found. I decided to organize a necktie party. I went out to my father's ranch on Capital avenue and got some rope for the hanging.

Then I went all over town in my flivver roadster and passed out the word: "We're going to have a lynching at the jail at 11 o'clock tonight."

Eleven o'clock was the deadline. I told everyone. Mostly I went to the speakeasies and rounded up the gang there. That is why so many of the mob were drunk.

We had the word passed over all the streets of San Jose. So that night the mob ran streaming around the jail. We made three attempts to batter the door. The tear gas poured out and got some of the boys down.

Officers Gassed

But it was worse on the officers inside.

One of our fellows picked up a tear bomb and threw it in the midst of the officers.

But when we broke into the jail I was scared stiff.

I was ready to back out.

The thing that scared me was seeing the screen to the cell-block torn down. I thought, "they'll get us inside there and lock us up for good."

But once the screen crashed, I dashed in and ran up the stairs after some deputy sheriffs. I was the first one of the gang to get on the second floor, where Thurmond was located.

Four or five of us made the first rush for the cell. The deputies pleaded with us not to take the prisoners.

Deputy Buffington, the jailer, with tears streaming down his face, said:

"Boys, let us kneel in prayer and pray to God in heaven that you take the right man."

Begins Prayer

One fellow dropped down on his knees at once in the aisle, and all the rest of us fellows of the gang all knelt in silent prayer. Then the prayer was broken

RELIGION CHANGE HALTED

BERLIN, Nov. 27—(UP)—Revolt in the militant German Christian faction of the Evangelical church threatened today to halt the progress of Nazification of religion.

Seven state branches of the faction quit over the week end and a number of leading theologians of the universities followed suit.

YOUTH ADMITS HE HEADED LYNCHERS

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP)—Anthony Catalbi, a slight, dark-haired youth not yet of age, boldly admitted today he was the leader of a mob that lynched T. H. Thurmond and J. M. Holmes, kidnapers, last night.

He told his story to a reporter amidst a crowd of San Jose citizens. Women, most of them older than he, interrupted him frequently, patting him on the back and saying:

"Wonderful." "That was fine." "Good for you." "You showed them."

Businessmen and others of all ages freely congratulated him. All seemed to know that the five foot six-inch youth had led the mobsters.

After a moment's hesitation about identifying himself, Catalbi said with a shrug:

"Oh, well, I guess it doesn't make any difference."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(UP) —The White House today announced personnel of two emergency boards created by the president to investigate labor disputes on the Southern Pacific and the Mobile and Ohio railroads.

The boards were created by the president after the railway board of mediation had reported its inability to adjust the disputes. The emergency boards are directed to investigate the controversies and to report to the president within 30 days. On the basis of these findings the president has power under the railway labor act to enforce any decisions he finds equitable.

Mrs. Wynekoop Repudiates Her Confession

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(UP) —Frank Tyrell, attorney for Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop, said today that his client had repudiated her "confession."

"I did not shoot Theta," Dr. Wynekoop was quoted by her attorney as declaring after an interview at the county jail where the physician is held on a charge of murder in connection with her daughter-in-law's death.

"Police put those words in my mouth," Dr. Wynekoop said.

700 MILLIONS IN GOVERNMENT BONDS MATURE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(UP) —Fresh from a week end visit with President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., Henry L. Morgenthau, acting secretary of the treasury, returned today to tackle the troublesome problem of refinancing $727,682,500 government securities which mature December 15.

The method of clearing this hurdle of government debt was expected to be worked out by Morgenthau this week in collaboration with his new aides, Tom K. Smith, president of the Boatmen's National bank of St. Louis, and Earle Baillie of New York.

A substantial rally in government securities last week, in the absence of federal reserve support, but aided by treasury purchasing, was expected to lead to a decision to refund the maturing obligations with a new issue in the regular manner. Although the government bond market is lower than it was during the summer, the treasury was expected to have little difficulty in floating a new issue. It was possible that a slightly higher interest rate would have to be offered.

There are several alternatives if

KENTUCKY RATIFIES REPEAL OF DRY LAW

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 27. —(UP)—Kentucky today became the thirty-third state to ratify formally the 21st amendment to the constitution of the United States, repealing the national prohibition amendment.

Nineteen prominent Kentuckians assembled at the capitol here to fulfill the formality of ratification.

Pennsylvania, Ohio and Utah also voted wet at the November 7 election, and will hold their ratification conventions December 5, thus completing the legal process by which the eighteenth amendment is erased from the nation's constitution.

LEADER OF MOB RELATES STORY OF LYNCHINGS

Ranch Boy 18 Years of Age Recruits Mob From Speakeasies

BY ANTHONY CATALBI

(Copyright, 1933, by United Press)

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP) I was the first one of the gang to break into the jail.

I came to town in the afternoon and saw the crowd around the jail and heard that Brooke Hart's body had been found. I decided to organize a necktie party. I went out to my father's ranch on Capital avenue and got some rope for the hanging.

Then I went all over town in my flivver roadster and passed out the word: "We're going to have a lynching at the jail at 11 o'clock tonight."

Eleven o'clock was the deadline. I told everyone. Mostly I went to the speakeasies and rounded up the gang there. That is why so many of the mob were drunk.

We had the word passed over all the streets of San Jose. So that night the mob ran streaming around the jail. We made three attempts to batter the door. The tear gas poured out and got some of the boys down.

Officers Gassed

But it was worse on the officers inside.

One of our fellows picked up a tear bomb and threw it in the midst of the officers.

But when we broke into the jail I was scared stiff.

I was ready to back out.

The thing that scared me was seeing the screen to the cell-block torn down. I thought, "they'll get us inside there and lock us up for good."

But once the screen crashed, I dashed in and ran up the stairs after some deputy sheriffs. I was the first one of the gang to get on the second floor, where Thurmond was located.

Four or five of us made the first rush for the cell. The deputies pleaded with us not to take the prisoners.

Deputy Buffington, the jailer, with tears streaming down his face, said:

"Boys, let us kneel in prayer and pray to God in heaven that you take the right man."

Begins Prayer

One fellow dropped down on his knees at once in the aisle, and all the rest of us fellows of the gang all knelt in silent prayer. Then the prayer was broken

PAIR TAKEN FROM CELLS AND HANGED

SHERIFF BADLY HURT

Reinforcements From San Francisco Arrive Too Late to Halt Lynching

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP) —Led by a boy in his teens, a mob of 5000 enraged citizens stormed the county jail here last night, seized Thomas Thurmond and John Holmes, confessed kidnap-slayers of Brooke Hart, 22, dragged them to St. James park, and hanged them from elm trees.

Thurmond was unconscious and probably dead when the rope was placed around his neck. He had been beaten and kicked senseless. Willing hands jerked his body into the air as the mob cheered. Holmes was naked. His clothing had been torn from him. He screamed for mercy.

"You've got the wrong man," he cried. "I'm Joe Pierce." A moment later his body dangled grotesquely from another elm a few yards from where Thurmond was lynched and in the shadow of a monument to President McKinley. He kicked convulsively and was still.

Men, boys and a sprinkling of women composed the mob. Many fainted and were trampled. Others screamed hysterically and fled. Others wept. Some laughed crazily. Some faces were flushed with a lust for vengeance. Others were deathly white.

The pent up emotion of an enraged city had burst its bounds, legal justice had been too slow. It was enough for the mob that Thurmond and Holmes had confessed. They decided on quick justice. The city had seethed since Nov. 16 when Thurmond was arrested. He was calling the palatial Hart home here demanding $40,000 ransom when he was captured. He confessed that Hart was dead and implicated Holmes. They had thrown the boys wire-trussed body off San Mateo bridge into San Francisco bay. Search for the body was begun. Two duck hunters found it Sunday.

That was the spark that ignited the mob.

Crowd Assembles

It began assembling immediately. All day long it milled around the old weather-beaten jail. It steadily increased in size. Sheriff William Emig called in 50 officers. Streets to the jail were barricaded. The big steel doors of the jail were re-inforced. Tear gas bombs and rifles were issued. Thurmond was locked in a remote cell on the third floor. Holmes was placed on the second floor.

By 9:30 p. m. 4000 shouting citizens were milling around the jail. Emig was desperate. He called Oakland and San Francisco police for reinforcements. But they were too late. A boy, not more than 16, climbed to the top of a shed and shouted in a shrill voice, "Come on fellows. Let's go get 'em."

This was the leader the mob had been waiting for.

The s ge of men and boys and a few women carried to the barriers Sheriff Emig's men had erected. They were swept aside. Tear bombs

YOUTH ADMITS HE HEADED LYNCHERS

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP)—Anthony Catalbi, a slight, dark-haired youth not yet of age, boldly admitted today he was the leader of a mob that lynched T. H. Thurmond and J. M. Holmes, kidnapers, last night.

He told his story to a reporter amidst a crowd of San Jose citizens. Women, most of them older than he, interrupted him frequently, patting him on the back and saying:

"Wonderful." "That was fine." "Good for you." "You showed them."

Businessmen and others of all ages freely congratulated him. All seemed to know that the five foot six-inch youth had led the mobsters.

After a moment's hesitation about identifying himself, Catalbi said with a shrug:

KIDNAPERS OF HART LYNCHED BY IRATE MOB

were hurled. The mob retreated, eyes smarting. Bricks, stones and other missles rained on the jail. Windows were broken and the lights extinguished.

A group rushed up with a length of oil well casing. Willing hands seized it and began battering the big steel doors. They collapsed and the mob surged in. Emig and his officers hurled tear bombs until the supply was exhausted. The mob swarmed in and the hunt for Thurmond and Holmes was on.

Refuse to Shoot

Officers refused to shoot but swung shillalehs and used their fists. Emig and Deputy Howard Buffington were felled and trampled. The others, overwhelmed by superior numbers, retreated, helpless. The crowd snatched cell keys from the jailers and raced to the cells.

Thurmond was atop his cell lavatory trying to escape through the roof when a hundred pairs of hands seized him and jerked him down. He was knocked down and kicked. Then picked up and knocked down again.

Part of his clothing was torn away. Blood flowed from his nose and ears and cuts on his body. He was dragged down to the second floor. There another group had seized Holmes. He also had been beaten and his clothes ripped away. Both were dragged down the stairs, their bruised and torn bodies leaving trails of blood.

They were beaten and kicked as they were pulled across the street to the electrically lighted park. Thurmond had lost consciousness. He looked as though he were dead. Holmes struggled. "You've got the wrong man," he screamed again and again. But the mob was in no mood for compassion.

"String 'em up," they cried. "Where's the rope? Who has the rope?" The lengths of hemp were produced. A noose was placed over Thurmond's head. The other end was tossed over the limb of a stately elm. Hands seized it, and the inert form was jerked 20 feet into the air.

The lynching of Holmes was expedited with the same precision but from another tree.

Lynchers Loiter

The maddened crowd loitered. They wanted to be sure their victims were dead and to make sure that Emig and his men wouldn't atempt rescue.

A new cry went up. It was "Let's burn 'em."

A torch of paper was touched to Thurmond's body but only his tattered clothing burned. The mob leaped on newspaper photographers, who tried to photograph the gruesome spectacle, and broke their cameras. Then Holmes' body was cut down.

The mob was preparing to fire it when Sheriff Emig and a platoon of deputies arrived. He demanded the bodies and exhorted the crowd to disperse. There were hasty conferences and the bodies were relinquished. Emig took them to the Williams' morgue where the body of young Hart also lay.

The mob's anger began to cool, but they continued to mill around until 1:30 a. m. today. By 3 a. m. most of them, except souvenir hunters, had gone to their homes. The latter fought for tattered bits of the victims' clothing. One man got one of Thurmond's shoes and triumphantly waved it aloft. Another got a piece of his trousers. Still others broke branches from the two death elms.

The hangings took place between 11:20 and 11:30 p. m. The battle that led to them lasted more than two hours.

Brooke Hart was a popular youth. He was the son of Alex J. Hart, owner of San Jose's largest department and pillar of the city's social and civic life. Young Brooke was a vice president of his father's company. He only recently was graduated from Santa Clara college and had gone into the store to learn the business, ultimately to become his father's successor.

He was kidnaped on the evening of November 9 after leaving the store. As he drove away from a parking lot in his roadster, en route to meet his father at the country club, Holmes accosted him. Then the story of the tragedy that stalked him was revealed in the confessions of Thurmond and Holmes.

Hart Transferred

Thurmond watched as Holmes leaped on the running board of the roadster, climbed in and threatened Hart with a gun. Thurmond drove behind the roadster in Holmes' automobile. At a lonely point on the Evans road Hart was transferred, under compulsion of the pistol, to the Holmes' car and Hart's roadster, the lights still burning, was abandoned.

Thurmond drove to the San Mateo bridge which spans upper San Francisco bay and links San Mateo and Alameda counties. As the car passed gatekeepers, Hart dared an outcry which was heard but misunderstood. The cries frightened or angered the abductors.

The automobile was halted on the bridge, on the Alameda side. Hart was forced from the machine. Holmes walked around behind the car, Thurmond related, and struck the youth twice on the head with a heavy cement brick.

Hart's arms and legs were bound with baling wire. Two cement blocks, weighing 22 pounds each, were fastened to the youth's limp body with wire.

Struck Over Head

"When Holmes first struck Hart over the head with the brick he hollered 'Help! Help'," Thurmond related. "But Holmes hit him on the head again with the brick and knocked Hart unconscious.

'Holmes took a hold of the upper part of Hart's body and I took a hold of him from the knees down and together we lifted him onto the railing of the San Mateo bridge and tossed him into the bay.

"I recall as we lifted him onto the bridge he struggled slightly."

The men separated, dividing $7.50 they had taken from Hart's body.

Thurmond went to San Francisco and that same night telephoned the Hart residence. He said the elder Hart, then a daughter, answered the telephone.

"I told her that her brother was being held for $40,000 ransom and if the family notified the police they would never see Brooke Hart again."

Thurmond tossed Hart's wallet into the bay at San Francisco, and its finding caused the search of a coastal vessel at Los Angeles. He returned to San Jose, conferred with Holmes, and for a week used cards, letters and the telephone in an effort to obtain the sum demanded. Other letters were mailed from San Francisco and Sacramento. Payment plans went awry when they failed to convince Hart that they held his son. They had not saved a single article of identification from the youth's clothing.

Plea Is Issued

On November 13 Mr. and Mrs. Hart issued a public plea to the kidnapers to negotiate and to provide proof that they held Brooke. The parents promised secrecy and immunity.

On November 15, Thurmond made his last telephone call to the father. Department of justice special agents were ready at the central telephone switchboard. The call was instantly traced to a San Jose garage.

Thurmond was arrested at the telephone. After six hours of questioning by police, the sheriff and department of justice agents, he gave a complete confession, implicating Holmes. The latter was found asleep at a hotel. A few hours later he too had confessed.

Holmes attempted to shift the greater part of the blame to Thurmond. He said that he had struck Hart, but only with his fist. He said that Thurmond, watching over the railing, saw Hart struggle momentarily on the surface of the water.

Thurmond took Holmes' gun and fired six times at the struggling youth, Holmes said.

"I don't think he'll come up," he told Holmes as they drove away.

Story Related

The story of the killing was given the Hart family November 16, seven days after Brooke disappeared. Mrs. Hart, weak from an operation, collapsed and has been in serious condition since. The elder Hart fainted.

A menacing crowd formed around the jail and the prisoners were rushed to San Francisco, where a federal grand jury indicted them on seven counts of kidnaping, issuing threats through the mails and conspiracy.

The pair was returned to San Jose on November 22, despite reports that a "vigilante" committee had been formed and awaited only the finding of Hart's body as a signal for action.

The body was found Sunday, November 26. Twelve hours after it was sighted by two duckhunters and positively identified by the youth's dentist, physician and friends, the assault on the jail was launched. Two hours later the kidnapers of Brooke Hart were hanged.

Eight Are Hurt

A check of hospitals today revealed that eight persons were seriously hurt in the mob action that preceded the lynching of John Holmes and Thomas Thurmond here last night.

The injured:

Sheriff William J. Emig, overcome by tear gas, his body covered with bruises, shock.

Deputy Sheriff Howard Buffington, chief jailer, deep gash on back of his head, many cuts and bruises, back injury. Suffering from tear gas.

Nick Ladner, state highway patrolman, shot in the arm and burned by a tear gas bullet fired by another officer.

Charles Hannah, bystander, treated for eye-sight impaired by tear-gas bombs.

James Carson, a cook, struck on the head by a flying brick, suffering a severe scalp wound, concussion of the brain and possible fractured skull.

Ralph Jordan, press correspondent, struck and bruised on the arm by a flying brick.

Several others were treated at San Jose hospitals for eye injuries caused by bursting tear gas bombs, while hundreds suffered smarting eyes, and headaches from the tear gas. Scores were bruised or slightly cut in the mob stampede.

Sheriff Injured

Sheriff William Emig was dangerously injured last night by the mob that lynched the slayers of Brooke Hart, 22, it was revealed today.

The sheriff was struck in the back of the head by a brick. X-rays were to be taken later today to determine extent of his injuries. Physicians at San Jose hospital where he was taken said he also was suffering from shock.

Witnesses said Emig helped a deputy protect Tony Serpa, 23, a prisoner, from the mob. The mob, it was said, mistook Serpa for one of the Hart killers and was attempting to break into his cell when Emig and the deputy intervened.

Serpa, awaiting sentence on a manslaughter charge, was transferred to the city prison at San Francisco.

Hunters Find Body

Leonard Dalve and Harold Stephens, Redwood City duck hunters, found the body of kidnaped and murdered Brooke Hart Sunday while rowing across San Francisco bay.

The body, badly mutilated, was floating in five feet of water in a marshland a half-mile south of the San Mateo bridge from where young Hart was thrown to his death. The hunter's boat struck the body and they turned about.

After covering it with a tarpaulin Dalve and Stephens pulled it ashore and notified authorities. It was taken to a branch morgue at Hayward and identified by the slain youth's physician, his dentist and those who worked with him in his father's department store here.

Hart's father, Alex J. Hart, had offered a $500 reward to whom ever found the remains.

RING LEADERS MAY NEVER BE PUNISHED, SAID

SAN JOSE, Calif., Nov. 27.—(UP)—Ringleaders of the shrieking mob that lynched Thomas Thurmond and John Holmes, kidnap-killers of Brooke Hart, last night, may never be punished, it appeared evident today.

Although refusing to be quoted by name, city and county officials were inclined to agree with Governor James Ralph, Jr., who, in an interview with the United Press at Sacramento, indicated he condoned the hangings.

"California will not put up with kidnapings," he said, "the lynching of Thurmond and Holmes proves it to the world. It is time drastic action was taken."

Sheriff William Emig of San Jose appealed to the governor for state militiamen at 10:30 o'clock last night, an hour before the snarling, hate-maddened mob stormed the county jail and seized the victims.

Refused Troops

"Troops were not needed," the governor said.

Emig and 50 officers fought the mob for two hours before the crazed throng broke into the jail. Tear bombs held the attackers off until 11:20 p. m., when they battered down the main door and surged into the jail proper.

Emig fell seriously wounded. He was struck by a brick while defending another prisoner whom the mob mistook for Thurmond. Eight persons were injured, none seriously, as the crowd, now numbering 10,000, milled about the jail and the two elm trees in St. James park where the captives were hanged.

The lynchings climaxed a 16-day search for young Hart, 22-year old son of Alex J. Hart, owner of San Jose's largest department store. The youth was kidnaped on November 9. Thurmond and Holmes were arrested on Nov. 16. Both confessed they killed him and threw his body into San Francisco bay.

The body was found Sunday by Leonard Dalve and Harold Stephens, San Jose duck hunters, while they were rowing across the bay.

The discovery again fired the dormant hate of San Jose which had seethed with threats of mob violence since Thurmond and Holmes confessed.

2000 at Jail

Within an hour 100 men and boys had gathered. By 7 p. m. 2000 were milling about the jail. By 9:30 p. m. the crowd had increased to 3000. More than 10,000 were swarming about the jail and park when the lynchings took place.

Thurmond was hanged first. He was unconscious. Holmes was hanged next. He was naked except for his socks and one shoe. Both men were beaten and kicked as the mob demanded their blood.

Before the bodies were cut down someone ignited a bunch of newspapers and set fire to Thurmond's tattered clothing.

The lynchers quickly dispersed while souvenir hunters swarmed around the trees fighting for bits of clothing, pieces of the gallows ropes and even bits of bark from the trees.

Efforts to identify leaders of the mob were futile, nor would city and county authorities reveal any identities, if they knew them. Men and boys, many of the latter in their early teens, composed most of the mob. But women were present too and their shrill imprecations mingled with cries of the men for vengeance.

It was a red-haired youth that fired the mob to action.

Youth Leads Mob

"Let's go get 'em," he shouted. The mob surged forward. Deputies dropped tear bombs from the second floor. Rage of the mob mounted. More tear bombs further infuriated them and they attacked the barricaded main door with a length of oil well casing.

Thurmond and Holmes were dragged out through the jail courtyard. The yard resembled a battle field. Swells of tear gas billowed over the scene. Broken glass, bricks, stones and other missles littered the place. Every window in the jail was shattered.

Non-participants sought safety whereever shelter offered. It was a scene unparalleled since 1923 when California's last mob lynching occurred.

The double hanging was ghastly. The noose was placed over Holmes' head and he was jerked up, then let down, then jerked up again as the mob demanded he "suffer as Brooke Hart did."

The mob was infuriated because Thurmond was unconscious and "did not know what was happening." They tried to revive him, to make him understand his fate, to no avail.

There were those who plead for legal justice, but they were few and their cries were drowned out by the shrieks of the mob.

Many who witnessed the hangings fainted, or fled, crying hysterically.

Holmes and Thurmond both were young. Holmes was married and the father of two children. Thurmond was single but had been courting a girl who jilted him and married another. Both men, until several weeks ago, were employed by oil companies. This association brought them together and led them to hatch the kidnaping plot that ended in their own deaths.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEED PLAN TO PROVIDE JOBS

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 27.—(UP)—President Roosevelt today reviewed the administration's gigantic public works program and methods of speeding it up to provide jobs for 4,000,000 men this winter.

The chief executive had before him comprehensive reports of Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who also is public works administrator and responsible for the carrying out of this important phase of the national recovery movement.

While it was not revealed what specific matters came up in the first of a series of conferences between Mr. Roosevelt and Ickes, observers here felt that the former was particularly anxious for the completion of a program of coordination between public works and the newly-created civil works authority.

Harry Hopkins, federal relief administrator, who is guiding the latter program, was expected to come to Warm Springs within the next few days to follow through the discussions between the president and Ickes.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt maintained silence on the monetary situation in spite of a two-hour conference with Henry Morgenthau jr., acting secretary of the treasury.

Morgenthau said: "We talked over treasury department affairs. Anything more will have to come from the president."

The acting secretary smilingly declined to say whether matters of policy were taken up and whether his meeting forecast a change in the gold-buying experiment which has come in for severe criticism from several quarters.

Close friends of the administration were insistent that the meeting portended no change and that Mr. Roosevelt was standing pat.

During the day Mr. Roosevelt was expected to sign his name to the 25 codes of fair competition which were brought here by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson. In the group was the important code for the motion picture industry.

Mr. Roosevelt planned a comparatively quiet week here, in sharp contrast to his first seven days. Morgenthau returned to Washington and John J. Raskob, former Democratic national chairman, also headed north.

Raskob said the general business situation had improved considerably, especially in the automobile industry. He is a director of General Motors corporation.

He was of the opinion that production in the motor industry would reach nearly 100 per cent of normal in January.

KIDNAPERS OF HART LYNCHED BY IRATE MOB

were hurled. The mob retreated, eyes smarting. Bricks, stones and other missles rained on the jail. Windows were broken and the lights extinguished.

A group rushed up with a length of oil well casing. Willing hands seized it and began battering the big steel doors. They collapsed and the mob surged in. Emig and his officers hurled tear bombs until the supply was exhausted. The mob swarmed in and the hunt for Thurmond and Holmes was on.

Refuse to Shoot

Officers refused to shoot but swung shillalehs and used their fists. Emig and Deputy Howard Buffington were felled and trampled. The others, overwhelmed by superior numbers, retreated, helpless. The crowd snatched cell keys from the jailers and raced to the cells.

Thurmond was atop his cell lavatory trying to escape through the roof when a hundred pairs of hands seized him and jerked him down. He was knocked down and kicked. Then picked up and knocked down again.

Part of his clothing was torn away. Blood flowed from his nose and ears and cuts on his body. He was dragged down to the second floor. There another group had seized Holmes. He also had been beaten and his clothes ripped away. Both were dragged down the stairs, their bruised and torn bodies leaving trails of blood.

They were beaten and kicked as they were pulled across the street to the electrically lighted park. Thurmond had lost consciousness. He looked as though he were dead. Holmes struggled. "You've got the wrong man," he screamed again and again. But the mob was in no mood for compassion.

"String 'em up," they cried. "Where's the rope? Who has the rope?" The lengths of hemp were produced. A noose was placed over Thurmond's head. The other end was tossed over the limb of a stately elm. Hands seized it, and the inert form was jerked 20 feet into the air.

The lynching of Holmes was expedited with the same precision but from another tree.

Lynchers Loiter

The maddened crowd loitered. They wanted to be sure their victims were dead and to make sure that Emig and his men wouldn't atempt rescue.

A new cry went up. It was "Let's burn 'em."

A torch of paper was touched to Thurmond's body but only his tattered clothing burned. The mob leaped on newspaper photographers, who tried to photograph the gruesome spectacle, and broke their cameras. Then Holmes' body was cut down.

The mob was preparing to fire it when Sheriff Emig and a platoon of deputies arrived. He demanded the bodies and exhorted the crowd to disperse. There were hasty conferences and the bodies were relinquished. Emig took them to the Williams' morgue where the body of young Hart also lay.

The mob's anger began to cool, but they continued to mill around until 1:30 a. m. today. By 3 a. m. most of them, except souvenir hunters, had gone to their homes. The latter fought for tattered bits of the victims' clothing. One man got one of Thurmond's shoes and triumphantly waved it aloft. Another got a piece of his trousers. Still others broke branches from the two death elms.

The hangings took place between 11:20 and 11:30 p. m. The battle that led to them lasted more than two hours.

Brooke Hart was a popular youth. He was the son of Alex J. Hart, owner of San Jose's largest department and pillar of the city's social and civic life. Young Brooke was a vice president of his father's company. He only recently was graduated from Santa Clara college and had gone into the store to learn the business, ultimately to become his father's successor.

He was kidnaped on the evening of November 9 after leaving the store As he drove away from a parking lot in his roadster, en route to meet his father at the country club. Holmes accosted him Then the story of the tragedy that stalked him was revealed in the confessions of Thurmond and Holmes.

Hart Transferred

Thurmond watched as Holmes leaped on the running board of the roadster, climbed in and threatened Hart with a gun, Thurmond drove behind the roadster in Holmes' automobile. At a lonely point on the Evans road Hart was transferred, under compulsion of the pistol, to the Holmes' car and Hart's roadster, the lights still burning, was abandoned.

Thurmond drove to the San Mateo bridge which spans upper San Francisco bay and links San Mateo and Alameda counties. As the car passed gatekeepers, Hart dared an outcry which was heard but misunderstood. The cries frightened or angered the abductors.

The automobile was halted on the bridge, on the Alameda side. Hart was forced from the machine Holmes walked around behind the car, Thurmond related, and struck the youth twice on the head with a heavy cement brick.

Hart's arms and legs were bound with baling wire. Two cement blocks, weighing 22 pounds each, were fastened to the youth's limp body with wire.

Struck Over Head

"When Holmes first struck Hart over the head with the brick he hollered 'Help! Help'," Thurmond related. "But Holmes hit him on the head again with the brick and knocked Hart unconscious.

'Holmes took a hold of the upper part of Hart's body and I took a hold of him from the knees down and together we lifted him onto the railing of the San Mateo bridge and tossed him into the bay.

"I recall as we lifted him onto the bridge he struggled slightly."

The men separated, dividing $7.50 they had taken from Hart's body.

Thurmond went to San Francisco and that same night telephoned the Hart residence. He said the elder Hart, then a daughter, answered the telephone.

"I told her that her brother was being held for $40,000 ransom and if the family notified the police they would never see Brooke Hart again."

Thurmond tossed Hart's wallet into the bay at San Francisco, and its finding caused the search of a coastal vessel at Los Angeles. He returned to San Jose, conferred with Holmes, and for a week used cards, letters and the telephone in an effort to obtain the sum demanded. Other letters were mailed from San Francisco and Sacramento. Payment plans went awry, when they failed to convince Hart that they held his son. They had not saved a single article of identification from the youth's clothing.

Plea Is Issued

On November 13 Mr. and Mrs. Hart issued a public plea to the kidnapers to negotiate and to provide proof that they held Brooke. The parents promised secrecy and immunity.

On November 15, Thurmond made his last telephone call to the father. Department of justice special agents were ready at the central telephone switchboard. The call was instantly traced to a San Jose garage.

Thurmond was arrested at the telephone. After six hours of questioning by police, the sheriff and department of justice agents, he gave a complete confession, implicating Holmes. The latter was found asleep at a hotel. A few hours later he too had confessed.

Holmes attempted to shift the greater part of the blame to Thurmond. He said that he had struck Hart, but only with his fist. He said that Thurmond, watching over the railing, saw Hart struggle momentarily on the surface of the water.

Thurmond took Holmes' gun and fired six times at the struggling youth, Holmes said.

"I don't think he'll come up," he told Holmes as they drove away.

Story Related

The story of the killing was given the Hart family November 16, seven days after Brooke disappeared. Mrs. Hart, weak from an operation, collapsed and has been in serious condition since. The elder Hart fainted.

A menacing crowd formed around the jail and the prisoners were rushed to San Francisco, where a federal grand jury indicted them on seven counts of kidnaping, issuing threats through the mails and conspiracy.

The pair was returned to San Jose on November 22, despite reports that a "vigilante" committee had been formed and awaited only the finding of Hart's body as a signal for action.

The body was found Sunday, November 26. Twelve hours after it was sighted by two duckhunters and positively identified by the youth's dentist, physician and friends, the assault on the jail was launched. Two hours later the kidnapers of Brooke Hart were hanged.

Eight Are Hurt

A check of hospitals today revealed that eight persons were seriously hurt in the mob action that preceded the lynching of John Holmes and Thomas Thurmond here last night.

The injured:

Sheriff William J. Emig, overcome by tear gas, his body covered with bruises, shock.

Deputy Sheriff Howard Buffington, chief jailer, deep gash on back of his head, many cuts and bruises, back injury. Suffering from tear gas.

Nick Ladner, state highway patrolman, shot in the arm and burned by a tear gas bullet fired by another officer.

Charles Hannah, bystander, treated for eye-sight impaired by tear-gas bombs.

James Carson, a cook, struck on the head by a flying brick, suffering a severe scalp wound, concussion of the brain and possible fractured skull.

Ralph Jordan, press correspondent, struck and bruised on the arm by a flying brick.

Several others were treated at San Jose hospitals for eye injuries caused by bursting tear gas bombs, while hundreds suffered smarting eyes, and headaches from the tear gas. Scores were bruised or slightly cut in the mob stampede.

Sheriff Injured

Sheriff William Emig was dangerously injured last night by the mob that lynched the slayers of Brooke Hart, 22, it was revealed today.

The sheriff was struck in the back of the head by a brick. X-rays were to be taken later today to determine extent of his injuries. Physicians at San Jose hospital where he was taken said he also was suffering from shock.

Witnesses said Emig helped a deputy protect Tony Serpa, 23, a prisoner, from the mob. The mob, it was said, mistook Serpa for one of the Hart killers and was attempting to break into his cell when Emig and the deputy intervened.

Serpa, awaiting sentence on a manslaughter charge, was transferred to the city prison at San Francisco.

Hunters Find Body

Leonard Dalve and Harold Stephens, Redwood City duck hunters, found the body of kidnaped and murdered Brooke Hart Sunday while rowing across San Francisco bay.

The body, badly mutilated, was floating in five feet of water in a marshland a half-mile south of the San Mateo bridge from where young Hart was thrown to his death. The hunter's boat struck the body and they turned about.

After covering it with a tarpaulin Dalve and Stephens pulled it ashore and notified authorities. It was taken to a branch morgue at Hayward and identified by the slain youth's physician, his dentist and those who worked with him in his father's department store here.

Hart's father, Alex J. Hart, had offered a $500 reward to whom ever found the remains.

RING LEADERS MAY NEVER BE PUNISHED, SAID

SAN JOSE, Calif., Nov. 27.—(UP)—Ringleaders of the shrieking mob that lynched Thomas Thurmond and John Holmes, kidnap-killers of Brooke Hart, last night, may never be punished, it appeared evident today.

Although refusing to be quoted by name, city and county officials were inclined to agree with Governor James Ralph, Jr., who, in an interview with the United Press at Sacramento, indicated he condoned the hangings.

"California will not put up with kidnapings," he said, "the lynching of Thurmond and Holmes proves it to the world. It is time drastic action was taken."

Sheriff William Emig of San Jose appealed to the governor for state militiamen at 10:30 o'clock last night, an hour before the snarling, hate-maddened mob stormed the county jail and seized the victims.

Refused Troops

"Troops were not needed," the governor said.

Emig and 50 officers fought the mob for two hours before the crazed throng broke into the jail. Tear bombs held the attackers off until 11:20 p. m., when they battered down the main door and surged into the jail proper.

Emig fell seriously wounded. He was struck by a brick while defending another prisoner whom the mob mistook for Thurmond. Eight persons were injured, none seriously, as the crowd, now numbering 10,000, milled about the jail and the two elm trees in St. James park where the captives were hanged.

The lynchings climaxed a 16-day search for young Hart, 22-year old son of Alex J. Hart, owner of San Jose's largest department store. The youth was kidnaped on November 9. Thurmond and Holmes were arrested on Nov. 16. Both confessed they killed him and threw his body into San Francisco bay.

The body was found Sunday by Leonard Dalve and Harold Stephens, San Jose duck hunters, while they were rowing across the bay.

The discovery again fired the dormant hate of San Jose which had seethed with threats of mob violence since Thurmond and Holmes confessed.

2000 at Jail

Within an hour 100 men and boys had gathered. By 7 p. m. 2000 were milling about the jail. By 9:30 p. m. the crowd had increased to 3000. More than 10,000 were swarming about the jail and park when the lynchings took place.

Thurmond was hanged first. He was unconscious. Holmes was hanged next. He was naked except for his socks and one shoe. Both men were beaten and kicked as the mob demanded their blood.

Before the bodies were cut down someone ignited a bunch of newspapers and set fire to Thurmond's tattered clothing.

The lynchers quickly dispersed while souvenir hunters swarmed around the trees fighting for bits of clothing, pieces of the gallows ropes and even bits of bark from the trees.

Efforts to identify leaders of the mob were futile, nor would city and county authorities reveal any identities, if they knew them. Men and boys, many of the latter in their early teens, composed most of the mob. But women were present too and their shrill imprecations mingled with cries of the men for vengeance.

It was a red-haired youth that fired the mob to action.

Youth Leads Mob

"Let's go get 'em," he shouted. The mob surged forward. Deputies dropped tear bombs from the second floor. Rage of the mob mounted. More tear bombs further infuriated them and they attacked the barricaded main door with a length of oil well casing.

Thurmond and Holmes were dragged out through the jail courtyard. The yard resembled a battle field. Swells of tear gas billowed over the scene. Broken glass, bricks, stones and other missles littered the place. Every window in the jail was shattered.

Non-participants sought safety whereever shelter offered. It was a scene unparalleled since 1923 when California's last mob lynching occurred.

The double hanging was ghastly. The noose was placed over Holmes' head and he was jerked up, then let down, then jerked up again as the mob demanded he "suffer as Brooke Hart did."

The mob was infuriated because Thurmond was unconscious and "did not know what was happening." They tried to revive him, to make him understand his fate, to no avail.

There were those who plead for legal justice, but they were few and their cries were drowned out by the shrieks of the mob.

Many who witnessed the hangings fainted, or fled, crying hysterically.

Holmes and Thurmond both were young. Holmes was married and the father of two children. Thurmond was single but had been courting a girl who jilted him and married another. Both men, until several weeks ago, were employed by oil companies. This association brought them together and led them to hatch the kidnaping plot that ended in their own deaths.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEED PLAN TO PROVIDE JOBS

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 27.—(UP)—President Roosevelt today reviewed the administration's gigantic public works program and methods of speeding it up to provide jobs for 4,000,000 men this winter.

The chief executive had before him comprehensive reports of Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who also is public works administrator and responsible for the carrying out of this important phase of the national recovery movement.

While it was not revealed what specific matters came up in the first of a series of conferences between Mr. Roosevelt and Ickes, observers here felt that the former was particularly anxious for the completion of a program of coordination between public works and the newly-created civil works authority.

Harry Hopkins, federal relief administrator, who is guiding the latter program, was expected to come to Warm Springs within the next few days to follow through the discussions between the president and Ickes.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt maintained silence on the monetary situation in spite of a two-hour conference with Henry Morgenthau jr., acting secretary of the treasury.

Morgenthau said: "We talked over treasury department affairs. Anything more will have to come from the president."

The acting secretary smilingly declined to say whether matters of policy were taken up and whether his meeting forecast a change in the gold-buying experiment which has come in for severe criticism from several quarters.

Close friends of the administration were insistent that the meeting portended no change and that Mr. Roosevelt was standing pat.

During the day Mr. Roosevelt was expected to sign his name to the 25 codes of fair competition which were brought here by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson. In the group was the important code for the motion picture industry.

Mr. Roosevelt planned a comparatively quiet week here, in sharp contrast to his first seven days. Morgenthau returned to Washington and John J. Raskob, former Democratic national chairman, also headed north.

Raskob said the general business situation had improved considerably, especially in the automobile industry. He is a director of General Motors corporation.

He was of the opinion that production in the motor industry would reach nearly 100 per cent of normal in January.

CONTINUANCE GRANTED IN OIL HEARINGS

Another delay in litigation started by the state of California in an effort to halt alleged slant hole drilling of oil wells at Huntington Beach to tap the state-owned tideland oil pool was granted this morning by Presiding Judge G. K. Scovel. Three suits pending against the Termo Oil company, scheduled for hearing today were postponed until December 4.

The continuance was requested by Roland Swaffield, attorney for the defendant oil companies and some of the individuals and was not opposed by L. G. Campbell, deputy from the state attorney general's office. That the continuance had been agreed upon previously was indicated by the fact that Superior Judge L. N. Turrentine of San Dilego, who is presiding in the oil litigation, was not present this morning.

The cases scheduled for hearing this morning and postponed were hearings on orders to show cause why the state should not be permitted to survey the wells named in the action to determine whether or not they had been "whipstocked" into the state oil pool. All the wells mentioned in the actions were drilled on property on the landward side of Ocean avenue and are alleged to have gone under the street, Pacific Electric right of way and a portion of the Standard Oil company lease. The orders to show cause were filed several months ago in connection with suits charging the defendants with trespassing on state property.

Wells named in the litigation involving the Termo company are at present off production. One of the wells, the one named in the original suit was shut down by stipulation between attorneys for the state and the defendant company. The other two wells were closed through temporary restraining orders issued when the new suits were filed.

Recently the state filed two actions against six other wells owned by independent operators not previously named in the litigation. These later suits demanded damages totalling $1,600,000. Companies named in the newest suits were the Wilshire Oil company and the Ambassador Petroleum corporation.

Pending the hearing on Assemblyman Utt's suit in Sacramento December 7 to determine if the state can legally accept royalties from state tidelands, oil men operating in the Huntington Beach town lot field are marking time, it was stated today by Cecil Rood, one of the committee of two named to carry on negotiations for settlement of the state's suits against tidelands drilling.

Governor Rolph at a recent hearing told the operators that he would look with favor on a settlement provided the oil men presented a reasonable offer.

In the event that the court rules that the state cannot accept royalties, a special session of the legislature is expected to be called.

The Public Forum

Communications under this heading must be signed by the name of the writer. These communications express the opinions of the writers of them. The opinions may or may not be the opinions of The Register.

Editor, The Register,
Dear Sir:—

Your leading editorial on November 22nd was devoted to an attack on Dr. O. M. W. Sprague and, by inference, all others who disagree with and are opposing President Roosevelt's monetary program.

By a striking coincidence, the first page of the same issue of your paper carried a news article about the resignation of Dr. Sprague, from which you could have learned—if you did not know—that he is:

(a). An eminent economist and publicist enjoying widespread confidence and respect.

(b).. A former instructor at Harvard University

(c.) That he gave up a position paying him $25,000 a year as financial advisor to the Bank of England to come and try to be of service to our country.

Putting it mildly, its it unbecoming to you, therefore, to fall in according Dr. Sprague the respect to which he is entitled, by his ability and achievements. The first line of your editorial starts off with "O. M. W. Sprague," just like you were writing about a police court offender. You do, however, accord him a "Mr." farther along in your article. Moreover, you descend in impugning Dr. Sprague's motives. That doesn't hurt Dr. Sprague in any informed quarter, but it does exhibit either your ignorance or wilful disregard of one of the common decencies of courtesy in criticism or debate.

In the head line of your article, you employ the terms, "Sabotage at work in 'New Deal' program." "Sabotage" implies ignorant, wanton destruction of valuable property or machinery like that of ignorant peasants throwing their wooden shoes through windows or into machinery.

To apply such aspersions to the large and rapidly increasing numbers of those who disagree with the President's monetary policies, merely reflects intolerance to an extreme. I believe, Sir, it will be found that the best informed and most responsible elements of our people disagree with those policies, are deeply concerned over their grave consequences,—and will rally to the support of sound money, protection of government integrity and credit and the restoration of such confidence as will encourage the resumption of business activities.

I do not believe that a majority of our people really want virtual repudiation of 46 per cent, or any amount, of the public debt by government fiat, with the destruction of confidence, the discouragement to thrift and other evils which are inevitable unless we return to sound monetary and fiscal policies.

JOHN PERRY.

HIT THAT COLD
WHERE IT LIVES—
in the System!

Don't fool yourself about a cold! It's nothing to be taken lightly nor treated lightly. A cold is an internal infection that will quickly spread within the system unless promptly checked. The wise thing to take for a cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

First of all, it is distinctly a cold remedy and not a "cure-all." Secondly, it is an internal treatment. Thirdly, it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. That's the treatment a cold requires and anything less is taking chances. All druggists sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, 30c and 50c. Ask for it by the full name and reject a substitute.

AMERICAN IDEALS IS SUBJECT FOR FORUM DISCUSSION

"Socrates, and American Ideals," will be the subject of Dr. Frederick W. Roman for his weekly lecture and forum discussion at the People's Forum, Third and Bush streets, at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Socrates lived from B. C. 469 to B. C. 399 and together with Plato and Aristotle who followed him gave the impetus to the western civilization which is now expressed in the American ideals of democracy, according to Dr. Roman. Athens, the scene of Socrates' life and activities in an educational and philosophic way, was ruled by a species of democracy in which every citizen was chosen in turn to take his place as one of the legislators and administrators.

"We have moved a considerable distance from the economics and government of Athens, but the American ideal of democracy is still indebted to Socrates for his keen analysis and recognition of the part that the citizen must play to preserve his democracy," said Dr. Roman.

The meeting is free and the public is invited.

This photo was taken during the fighting at the San Jose, Calif., jail and shows the crowd as one of the purported kidnapers was dragged from the jail for lynching. The men were beaten, kicked and stripped by the crowds. The prisoner was submerged in the attacking hordes.

The Public Forum

Communications under this heading must be signed by the name of the writer. These communications express the opinions of the writers of them. The opinions may or may not be the opinions of The Register.

Editor, The Register,
Dear Sir:—

Your leading editorial on November 22nd was devoted to an attack on Dr. O. M. W. Sprague and, by inference, all others who disagree with and are opposing President Roosevelt's monetary program.

By a striking coincidence, the first page of the same issue of your paper carried a news article about the resignation of Dr. Sprague, from which you could have learned—if you did not know—that he is:

(a). An eminent economist and publicist enjoying widespread confidence and respect.

(b). A former instructor at Harvard University

(c.) That he gave up a position paying him $25,000 a year as financial advisor to the Bank of England to come and try to be of service to our country.

Putting it mildly, its it unbecoming to you, therefore, to fail in according Dr. Sprague the respect to which he is entitled, by his ability and achievements. The first line of your editorial starts off with "O. M. W. Sprague," just like you were writing about a police court offender. You do, however, accord him a "Mr." farther along in your article. Moreover, you descend in impugning Dr. Sprague's motives. That doesn't hurt Dr. Sprague in any informed quarter, but it does exhibit either your ignorance or wilful disregard of one of the common decencies of courtesy in criticism or debate.

In the head line of your article, you employ the terms, "Sabotage at work in 'New Deal' program." "Sabotage" implies ignorant, wanton destruction of valuable property or machinery like that of ignorant peasants throwing their wooden shoes through windows or into machinery.

To apply such aspersions to the large and rapidly increasing numbers of those who disagree with the President's monetary policies, merely reflects intolerance to an extreme. I believe, Sir, it will be found that the best informed and most responsible elements of our people disagree with those policies, are deeply concerned over their grave consequences,—and will rally to the support of sound money, protection of government integrity and credit and the restoration of such confidence as will encourage the resumption of business activities.

I do not believe that a majority of our people really want virtual repudiation of 46 per cent, or any amount, of the public debt by government fiat, with the destruction of confidence, the discouragement to thrift and other evils which are inevitable unless we return to sound monetary and fiscal policies.

JOHN PERRY.

HIT THAT COLD
in the System!
Don't fool yourself about a cold! It's nothing to be taken lightly nor treated lightly. A cold is an internal infection that will quickly spread within the system unless promptly checked. The wise thing to take for a cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.
First of all, it is distinctly a cold remedy and not a "cure-all." Secondly, it is an internal treatment. Thirdly, it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. That's the treatment a cold requires and anything less is taking chances. All druggists sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, 30c and 50c. Ask for it by the full name and reject a substitute.

AMERICAN IDEALS IS SUBJECT FOR FORUM DISCUSSION

"Socrates, and American Ideals," will be the subject of Dr. Frederick W. Roman for his weekly lecture and forum discussion at the People's Forum, Third and Bush streets, at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Socrates lived from B. C. 469 to B. C. 399 and together with Plato and Aristotle who followed him gave the impetus to the western civilization which is now expressed in the American ideals of democracy, according to Dr. Roman. Athens, the scene of Socrates' life and activities in an educational and philosophic way, was ruled by a species of democracy in which every citizen was chosen in turn to take his place as one of the legislators and administrators.

"We have moved a considerable distance from the economics and government of Athens, but the American ideal of democracy is still indebted to Socrates for his keen analysis and recognition of the part that the citizen must play to preserve his democracy," said Dr. Roman.

The meeting is free and the public is invited.

LAND BANK OFFICER SPEAKS ON LOANS

Unable to attend a meeting of packing house managers and directors scheduled for Friday afternoon Dr. E. A. Stodyk, president of the Berkeley Bank for Cooperatives was represented by Secretary Heffernen of the bank.

Heffernan reviewed facilities of the new setup offered through the bank which was established two months ago as a part of the Agricultural Credit system and described the two types of loans offered by the bank.

The first type he described as "loans on facilities" which accept as collateral packing house machinery, equipment and buildings. These loans may run from 10 to 18 years at four and one-half per cent interest. The second type loan he described as merchandise loans for the purpose of taking care of seasonal handling charges and the purchase of material. These loans run for not more than one year at four per cent interest and are secured by crops going through the house to which the loan is made.

Explaining that the bank will loan up to 60 per cent of appraised value, Heffernen said that the Berkeley bank handles loans up to $200,000, amounts higher than that are handled direct from Washington, D. C.

DODGE DELIVERIES JUMP OVER 1932

The salesgraph still refuses to act "according to Hoyle" in the Dodge dealers' national set-up according to information received by wire today from Dodge officials at Detroit. Retail deliveries for the week ending November 4 registered an 11.1 per cent increase over deliveries of the previous week. This singularly constant rise in Dodge dealers' sales has come to be regarded as the year's outstanding trade phenomenon and completely justifies the prior statement of K. T. Keller, president of Dodge Brothers Corporation to the effect that factory production would not be allowed to taper off, but that new materials would be purchased to take care of increasing late season demand for cars and trucks.

The latest sales tabulation released for publication by A. van DerZee, general sales manager of Dodge Brothers corporation, proves the correctness with which the company's merchandising experts guaged sales levels of the new six with which Dodge re-entered the low-priced field this year. During the week ending November 4, Dodge dealers raised their score another few notches by delivering 5104 passenger cars and trucks, as compared with 4594 retail sales recorded in the preceding week. These figures denote a delivery increase of 11.1 per cent over the preceding week and a gain of 840 per cent over deliveries made by Dodge dealers in the corresponding week in 1932. Dodge dealers' retail deliveries for the year till November 4 are given as totaling 163,031 vehicles, as against 61,793 sold within a like period last year, the gain being 165 per cent.

HOTEL MEN MOVE TO CHANGE LIQUOR LAW

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Sponsored by hotelmen and businessmen, a new movement to "liberalize" the California liquor laws to permit hotels and restaurants to serve all kinds of drinks to guests was launched today.

The first step to be taken, according to Hugh McKevitt, attorney, was the presentation of an initiative petition to Attorney General U. S. Webb to receive a proper title.

Following Webb's action, the petition would be given rapid circulation. McKevitt said he expected to obtain the necessary 110,811 signatures 'within 30 days." The petitions would require a referendum of the state's voters on plans to change the law adopted by a similar method last June.

The show, intended as an annual event, will be limited to rabbit entries and will be open to breeders in this section of the country, inquiries revealed.

An advisor has been appointed at each school to help the Junior Police at any time. W. P. Read is sponsor of the Willard organization.

Teachers Visit U. C. L. A.

Early in November a group of junior high school teachers, Miss Nora Reid and Miss Olive Wherry of Lathrop, and Miss Vanche Plumb and Mrs. Maurine Scott of Willard, observed the work in special reading classes under the direction of the psychology department of U. C. L. A. In these classes pupils from seven to 14 years of age who had been unable to learn to read by the method generally used were being taught by the kinesthetic method, which emphasizes muscular reaction rather than visual image. The Santa Ana teachers were so enthusiastic over what they saw accomplished that they plan to introduce soon some of the devices to improve the quality and speed of slow readers in the schools where they work.

LAND BANK OFFICER SPEAKS ON LOANS

Unable to attend a meeting of packing house managers and directors scheduled for Friday afternoon Dr. E. A. Stodyk, president of the Berkeley Bank for Cooperatives was represented by Secretary Heffernen of the bank.

Heffernan reviewed facilities of the new setup offered through the bank which was established two months ago as a part of the Agricultural Credit system and described the two types of loans offered by the bank.

The first type he described as "loans on facilities" which accept as collateral packing house machinery, equipment and buildings. These loans may run from 10 to 18 years at four and one-half per cent interest. The second type loan he described as merchandise loans for the purpose of taking care of seasonal handling charges and the purchase of material. These loans run for not more than one year at four per cent interest and are secured by crops going through the house to which the loan is made.

Explaining that the bank will loan up to 60 per cent of appraised value, Heffernen said that the Berkeley bank handles loans up to $300,000, amounts higher than that are handled direct from Washington, D. C.

DODGE DELIVERIES JUMP OVER 1932

The salesgraph still refuses to act "according to Hoyle" in the Dodge dealers' national set-up according to information received by wire today from Dodge officials at Detroit. Retail deliveries for the week ending November 4 registered an 11.1 per cent increase over deliveries of the previous week. This singularly constant rise in Dodge dealers' sales has come to be regarded as the year's outstanding trade phenomenon and completely justifies the prior statement of K. T. Keller, president of Dodge Brothers Corporation to the effect that factory production would not be allowed to taper off, but that new materials would be purchased to take care of increasing late season demand for cars and trucks.

The latest sales tabulation released for publication by A. van DerZee, general sales manager of Dodge Brothers corporation, proves the correctness with which the company's merchandising experts guaged sales levels of the new six with which Dodge re-entered the low-priced field this year. During the week ending November 4, Dodge dealers raised their score another few notches by delivering 5104 passenger cars and trucks, as compared with 4594 retail sales recorded in the preceding week. These figures denote a delivery increase of 11.1 per cent over the preceding week and a gain of 840 per cent over deliveries made by Dodge dealers in the corresponding week in 1932. Dodge dealers' retail deliveries for the year till November 4 are given as totaling 163,031 vehicles, as against 61,793 sold within a like period last year, the gain being 165 per cent.

HOTEL MEN MOVE TO CHANGE LIQUOR LAW

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Sponsored by hotelmen and businessmen, a new movement to "liberalize" the California liquor laws to permit hotels and restaurants to serve all kinds of drinks to guests was launched today.

The first step to be taken, according to Hugh McKevitt, attorney, was the presentation of an initiative petition to Attorney General U. S. Webb to receive a proper title.

Following Webb's action, the petition would be given rapid circulation. McKevitt said he expected to obtain the necessary 110,811 signatures "within 30 days." The petitions would require a referendum of the state's voters on plans to change the law adopted by a similar method last June.

Davies Appointed Manager of Show

F. C. Davies, of Orange, has been appointed superintendent of the Bellflower Rabbit Breeders association show to be held in that community between the dates of January 4 and 7, inclusive, it was announced today by the committee on arrangements. Serving with Davies on the committee are Ed Morse of Santa Ana, and O. Gilfry of Fullerton, it was added. The show, intended as an annual event, will be limited to rabbit entries and will be open to breeders in this section of the country, inquiries revealed.

News Notes From Santa Ana Schools

Frances Willard

JUNIOR POLICE

The Junior Police of Santa Ana was founded May 15, 1931, by F. W. Howard, chief of police. Twenty seven members were chosen from junior high and high schools, forming a total of 81 members. Since that time two additional squads, of seven members each, have been formed, one at Freemont and the other at St. Joseph's.

A total of 500 boys are now or have been members of this helpful club. A chief and associate chief have charge of the boys. Art Cascy was the first chief, Ed Farnsworth the second, and Harold McCuistion holds the position at present, Jack Wallace acting as his assistant. An advisor has been appointed at each school to help the Junior Police at any time. W. P. Read is sponsor of the Willard organization.

Teachers Visit U. C. L. A.

Early in November a group of junior high school teachers, Miss Nora Reid and Miss Olive Wherry of Lathrop, and Miss Vanche Plumb and Mrs. Maurine Scott of Willard, observed the work in special reading classes under the direction of the psychology department of U. C. L. A. In these classes pupils from seven to 14 years of age who had been unable to learn to read by the method generally used were being taught by the kinesthetic method, which emphasizes muscular reaction rather than visual image. The Santa Ana teachers were so enthusiastic over what they saw accomplished that they plan to introduce soon some of the devices to improve the quality and speed of slow readers in the schools where they work.

Julia Lathrop

Contest Winner

Frenona Ferguson of the L7th grade won the book cover contest directed by Miss Leona Calkins of Lathrop Library during National Children's Book week. The winning of the prize for the most attractive and practical book cover made by any student in the school, not only brought honor to Frenona, but to her home room class. The prize of one dollar will be presented to the class, of which Miss Olive Wherry is the home room teacher.

To give your turkey dressing a nut-like flavor use Shredded Wheat Biscuit in place of dry bread. Two biscuits are ample for the average turkey, while a larger bird may require three biscuits for the dressing. You will enjoy the different flavor and the light fluffiness that the Shredded Wheat produces. Shredded Wheat, poultry seasoning, oysters, mushrooms—all of these ingredients for turkey dressing are featured at your Pay'n Takit store this week.

2000 TURKEYS ARRIVE HERE FOR FEAST DAY

With Thanksgiving day, 1933, just in the offing the 2000 turkeys which arrived here this morning from the Apple Valley ranch in San Bernardino county of Klamm and Nelson of the Broadway market, are eloquent reminders that the national feast day has arrived again.

Imagine, if you can, 2000 turkeys, row upon row, at the plant of the Santa Ana Ice company, and then imagine—and this is easy, the aroma rising from hundreds and hundreds of ovens in this vicinity when the turkeys have been stuffed and made ready for Thanksgiving dinners.

The turkeys are half of the 4000 birds of the giant bronze variety raised on the Apple Valley ranch this year which has been visited by many Orange county residents. The breed was carefully developed by the owners of the Broadway market, by selective breeding and the result, they assert is a stockily built fowl with more meat value per pound of bird than any other variety known.

All of the turkeys are about seven months old, and one of the toms, seven and one-half months, weighs 29 pounds dressed. The record in turkey raising was made by the firm who raised at the ranch this year a Tom turkey weighing 35 pounds at seven and a half months. According to Nelson, scientific care and feeding enters largely in the success of their venture. The super-Tom is to be kept for breeding purposes.

Visitors to the ranch were interested in observing the constant care and attention given the birds. An idea of the size of the project may be gained from the fact that in the exclusive grain diet of the turkeys fed to bring the birds to the correct marketable condition, more than a quarter of a million pounds of corn, wheat and barley were used. Birds were divided in flocks of 500 each.

Birds from the ranch have been sold to cafes all over Southern California, according to Nelson. Valued not only for their meat, the turkeys from the ranch have been sought by turkey breeders in many parts of the country. The Japanese government has secured a number of the turkeys to start a turkey-raising project in Japan, a country where the turkey is unknown.

The great progress in developing turkeys from the wild variety which were used by the Pilgrim fathers in their first Thanksgiving day dinners is shown says Nelson, in the great difference in the size of the fowls. Wild hen turkeys seldom weigh more than seven or eight pounds and a yearling Tom averaged about 14 pounds, Nelson states.

READY TO CELEBRATE

Part of a shipment of 2000 turkeys which arrived here this morning from the Apple Valley ranch of Klamm and Nelson, proprietors of the Broadway market, is pictured here, ready to help in the observance of Thanksgiving. The birds all are about seven months of age and are dressed for the oven. They are a part of a flock of 4000 raised by the firm this summer. H. E. Nelson is shown holding one of the turkeys. STUDENTS HEAR ADDRESS BY SOCIOLOGIST

Interesting charts bearing upon production and consumption, employment and unemployment, featured a lecture delivered Saturday night by James Latham, well-known Los Angeles sociologist, at the Temple theater, this city, under auspices of the newly organized Students Forum of Orange county.

Howard Barnes, of the Santa Ana Junior college, presided over the forum, which, though a strictly student affair, was open to the public. Barnes was assisted by Kenneth Fraser, another member of the junior college student body.

Indicative of the growing interest on the part of high school and college students in social and economic questions, was the large number of young people who attended the lecture, some of them taking notes of facts disclosed by the charts.

According to Fraser, arrangements are being made by the Students Forum to conduct a series of lectures on important social and economic problems to which the public will be invited.

MOTORIST FOUND DEAD IN CAR ON COAST BOULEVARD

T. M. Ferris, about 50 years old, 5217 Hollywood boulevard, Los Angeles, was found dead in his car on Coast boulevard, near Dana Point at 1:15 p. m. Sunday by State Highway Patrolman Ray Bradfield, after the latter had noticed that the car had been parked for several hours and investigated, thinking it might have been abandoned.

Coroner Earl R. Abbey, who investigated, said today it is his opinion that Ferris was taken ill while he was driving toward Los Angeles. The man had rolled up a lap robe for a pillow, curled himself up in the back seat and spread his overcoat for a cover. Apparently he went to sleep and did not awaken. He probably stopped the previous night, the coroner said. No inquest will be held.

The body was removed to the Roy Divel Funeral Home at San Clemente where an autopsy was ordered for today by Dr. John C. Montanos, county autopsy surgeon. Coroner Abbey got in touch with a friend of the deceased, P. C. Blackburn of Los Angeles, who said Ferris' relatives lived in the east. They were notified by wire.

HAMSTRUNG

Next week the fireworks start on Senator Copeland's new bill regulating foodstuffs, drugs and cosmetics insofar as advertising and content are concerned.

Proprietary drug men, beauticians and certain food manufacturers have collected a tidy war-chest to slaughter the bill when the Senate Commerce sub-committee takes it up either December 5 or 7.

Officials of the Food and Drug Administration, led by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rex Tugwell, are packing a little surprise dynamite of their own if the opposition gets too hot or persistent.

As their cleverest maneuver of all so far, opponents of the revised food and drug act have dusted off a bill passed in 1919 which says no administrative agency of the government may spend money in an effort to influence Congressional legislation.

This hamstrings the publicity department of the Food and Drug Administration. They're afraid the cost of some mimeographed press statement may be charged against them as a violation of the law.

PHONY

The patent medicine boys are busily engaged in educating the public on what they consider the bill's greatest menace. They say it will deprive us of all of the right of self-medication and drive us to the doctor. Then we'll get bills a lot higher than packaged medicines on the drugstore shelf.

They further say passage of the act will menace the jobs of 2,000,000 men.

Food and Drug officials retort that no one will be deprived of packaged medicine so long as it tells the truth about itself on the label and in newspaper, magazine and radio advertising.

As for the 2,000,000 men apt to lose jobs they say they can't imagine that many are employed in manufacturing and selling phony goods.

When Senator Copeland calls his committee to order he'll be opening a show worth seeing.

It is going to be hotly contested. Dramatics will be injected by both sides.

And the bill's fate affects all of us.

UN-SUGARED

Washington and New York have had an unofficial and nervous visitor recently in the person of Cuban Secretary of Agriculture Hevia.

Hevia wore a path between Wall Street and the seat of government trying to find out what America was going to do about sugar.

He had heard rumors Uncle Sam was going to curtail sugar importations or demand a correlation between production and consumption—or both. Should he hold down Cuba's production or let it run full blast?

When Secretary Hevia went to the Agricultural Department here he didn't get a whole lot of satisfaction He was referred to the State Department.

After explaining his mission to the gentlemen of state he had the satisfaction of listening to one of them 'phone Agriculture and ask just what was going to be done about Cuban sugar.

"You tell us what's going to happen politically in Cuba," came the response, "and we can answer the question.

That was a poser. Hevia still hasn't an answer.

Officials of the Agriculture Department privately doubt whether the Grau San Martin government could control sugar production even if it tried.

Their scouts say Grau is in control of Havana but none too strong in the provinces where the cane is raised.

DAMAGES

Look shortly for a move by Civil Works Administration to apply a form of workmen's compensation insurance to the 4,000,000 it expects to have in made jobs by February 1.

Administrator Harry Hopkins doesn't want to have that many men subject to possible injury and let them hold the government liable for full damages.

Forty-four states have workers' compensation acts. Something similar probably will be blanketed on this newest army of re-employed.

SWAP

Although a great show of heated bargaining is being made reports from behind the drop curtain indicate trade reciprocity negotiations between the United States and Great Britain are proceeding quite amicably.

From this point of observation mutual concessions will be made whereby England takes our raw materials such as cotton, wheat, tobacco and petroleum, in exchange for which we agree to ease up on such competing exports as autos, machinery, iron and steel goods.

No hair is flying in the negotiations. Of course England would like a definite debt revision, arguing that would give her more money to buy our goods.

DODGERS

Not many people notice it but all the Senate Banking Committee disclosures of income tax phenagling by the big shots dates before 1931.

In that year Vice-President Garner—then Speaker—put through a provision preventing the sale of capital assets for the purpose of charging a loss against income. This was the prize trick for dodging taxes.

A lot of folks around Washington who should know it are talking out loud about legislation to stop such a practice and it's already on the books.

RUSSIA

All sorts of plans to finance the Soviet trade we hope to get are being developed underground The main idea seems to be to pass the buck to Uncle Sam for as much as he will take.

Original visions of one hundred per cent government financing via the RFC are out but it is probable that the RFC will indirectly assume a contingent risk for part of the credit extended. The most likely outcome is an RFC guarantee of manufacturers' costs—leaving the manufacturers to take a chance on collecting their profit.

The Soviet government is not at all disturbed because its credit is hawked at a discount abroad. On the contrary they find it a useful way to save money. They have developed an especially skillful technique in Germany where they buy in their own notes at a 20 to 30 per cent discount and pay them off in blocked marks for a total saving of nearly 50 per cent. It might be quite a catastrophe to Soviet purchasing plans if their credit were suddenly rated A1.

The Russian government has taken great care never to default on its foreign commercial obligations. The best estimates say this commercial debt has been reduced from $500,000,000 to $350,000,000 in the past two years.

TRADE

If Andy Mellon's aluminum company thinks it has a swell new market in Russia it is in for a shock. The Russians expect to produce enough aluminum themselves with Dnieprostroi power to compete actively with Uncle Andy all over the world.

Our copper producers will have a temporary boom until the Ural mines get going. Then we'll have trouble selling any more.

GENERALSHIP

New York credits Secretary Ickes with smart generalship in his handling of the oil price-fixing row.

A hearing last week would have meant bitter argument between irreconcilable factions. The Independent Oil Companies Alliance of America—composed of the smaller producers—was prepared to deliver a carload of witnesses to prove that price-fixing was all wet and would smack the consumer in the eye. Some of the big companies which favor production control were also ready to make a noise.

So Ickes has decided to give production control advocates 90 days to show their plan will work. If it does, O.K. If not, price-fixing is next on the bill of fare.

The next part of it is that price-fixing will be much easier to administer in 90 days than it would be now because of rising spring consumption. Hence postponing its trial gives it a better break.

GOLDMAN

The letter which Henry Goldman jr. recently wrote to the senate investigating committee admitting the necessity for federal regulation of the stock exchange caused a greater commotion on the Big Board than the recent tear gas bomb explosion. The resentment among brokers at the "treason" by a member of the exchange is terrific.

Two hours after the contents of the letter became known young Goldman—who is a specialist and "runs the book" on certain oil stocks—had lost half of his accounts. On the following day most of his remaining regular business vanished. Of course exchange officials had nothing to do with this punishment.

FORESIGHT

Partners of about 15 stock exchange houses got together at a very private meeting last week to discuss the future outlook for the securities business. Throughout the conference the atmosphere was exceedingly gloomy.

Finally the majority of those present agreed to meet again six months hence. If things don't look any brighter by then they want to talk over a possible merger of their firms—in some other field of business.

OPIUM

An American delegate to the advisory commission on the opium and drug traffic in Geneva recently accused Japan of encouraging increased opium production in Manchukuo. He stressed as proof the fact that Manchukuo coins bear an opium poppy, that airplanes have dropped pamphlets urging inhabitants of the eastern provinces and Jehol to cultivate the poppy, and the significant halving of taxes formerly levied by the Chinese government on opium fields. A European firm operating in Persia is chartering ships to transport narcotics to Manchukuo contrary to Chinese law.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE A FOOTBALL REFEREE

M. J. ("MIKE") THOMPSON, FAMOUS FOOTBALL REFEREE

IF YOU WANT TO SEE nerve strain, look at "Mike" Thompson's job—refereeing two tons of football brawn, seeing every detail, but never getting in the players' way. "Mike" Thompson has been a steady smoker for years. "I'm open-minded on cigarettes," he says, "but I've got to keep my nerves in shape, so I stick to Camels."

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

M. J. ("Mike") Thompson, football's most famous referee, has to keep his nerves healthy. He says:

"Because nothing can be allowed to interfere with healthy nerves I smoke Camels. I have tried them all—given every popular brand a chance to show what it can offer. Camels don't upset my nerves even when I smoke constantly. And the longer I smoke them the more I come to appreciate their mildness and rich flavor."

Many smokers who have changed to Camels report that their nerves are no longer irritable . . . "jumpy." Switch to Camels yourself. You will find that Camels do not jangle your nerves—or tire your taste.

2000 TURKEYS ARRIVE HERE FOR FEAST DAY

With Thanksgiving day, 1933, just in the offing the 2000 turkeys which arrived here this morning from the Apple Valley ranch in San Bernardino county of Klamm and Nelson of the Broadway market, are eloquent reminders that the national feast day has arrived again.

Imagine, if you can, 2000 turkeys, row upon row, at the plant of the Santa Ana Ice company, and then imagine—and this is easy, the aroma rising from hundreds and hundreds of ovens in this vicinity when the turkeys have been stuffed and made ready for Thanksgiving dinners.

The turkeys are half of the 4000 birds of the giant bronze variety raised on the Apple Valley ranch this year which has been visited by many Orange county residents. The breed was carefully developed by the owners of the Broadway market, by selective breeding and the result, they assert is a stockily built fowl with more meat value per pound of bird than any other variety known.

All of the turkeys are about seven months old, and one of the toms, seven and one-half months, weighs 29 pounds dressed. The record in turkey raising was made by the firm who raised at the ranch this year a Tom turkey weighing 35 pounds at seven and a half months. According to Nelson, scientific care and feeding enters largely in the success of their venture. The super-Tom is to be kept for breeding purposes.

Visitors to the ranch were interested in observing the constant care and attention given the birds. An idea of the size of the project may be gained from the fact that in the exclusive grain diet of the turkeys fed to bring the birds to the correct marketable condition, more than a quarter of a million pounds of corn, wheat and barley were used. Birds were divided in flocks of 500 each.

Birds from the ranch have been sold to cafes all over Southern California, according to Nelson. Valued not only for their meat, the turkeys from the ranch have been sought by turkey breeders in many parts of the country. The Japanese government has secured a number of the turkeys to start a turkey-raising project in Japan, a country where the turkey is unknown.

The great progress in developing turkeys from the wild variety which were used by the Pilgrim fathers in their first Thanksgiving day dinners is shown says Nelson, in the great difference in the size of the fowls. Wild hen turkeys seldom weigh more than seven or eight pounds and a yearling Tom averaged about 14 pounds, Nelson states.

READY TO CELEBRATE

Part of a shipment of 2000 turkeys which arrived here this morning from the Apple Valley ranch of Klamm and Nelson, proprietors of the Broadway market, is pictured here, ready to help in the observance of Thanksgiving. The birds all are about seven months of age and are dressed for the oven. They are a part of a flock of 4000 raised by the firm this summer. H. E. Nelson is shown holding one of the turkeys. STUDENTS HEAR ADDRESS BY SOCIOLOGIST

Interesting charts bearing upon production and consumption, employment and unemployment, featured a lecture delivered Saturday night by James Latham, well-known Los Angeles sociologist, at the Temple theater, this city, under auspices of the newly organized Students Forum of Orange county.

Howard Barnes, of the Santa Ana Junior college, presided over the forum, which, though a strictly student affair, was open to the public. Barnes was assisted by Kenneth Fraser, another member of the junior college student body.

Indicative of the growing interest on the part of high school and college students in social and economic questions, was the large number of young people who attended the lecture, some of them taking notes of facts disclosed by the charts.

According to Fraser, arrangements are being made by the Students Forum to conduct a series of lectures on important social and economic problems to which the public will be invited.

MOTORIST FOUND DEAD IN CAR ON COAST BOULEVARD

T. M. Ferris, about 50 years old, 5217 Hollywood boulevard, Los Angeles, was found dead in his car on Coast boulevard, near Dana Point at 1:15 p. m. Sunday by State Highway Patrolman Ray Bradfield, after the latter had noticed that the car had been parked for several hours and investigated, thinking it might have been abandoned.

Coroner Earl R. Abbey, who investigated, said today it is his opinion that Ferris was taken ill while he was driving toward Los Angeles. The man had rolled up a lap robe for a pillow, curled himself up in the back seat and spread his overcoat for a cover. Apparently he went to sleep and did not awaken. He probably stopped the previous night, the coroner said. No inquest will be held.

The body was removed to the Roy Divel Funeral Home at San Clemente where an autopsy was ordered for today by Dr. John C. Montanos, county autopsy surgeon. Coroner Abbey got in touch with a friend of the deceased, P. C. Blackburn of Los Angeles, who said Ferris' relatives lived in the east. They were notified by wire.

WASHINGTON

HAMSTRUNG

Next week the fireworks start on Senator Copeland's new bill regulating foodstuffs, drugs and cosmetics insofar as advertising and content are concerned.

Proprietary drug men, beauticians and certain food manufacturers have collected a tidy war-chest to slaughter the bill when the Senate Commerce sub-committee takes it up either December 5 or 7.

Officials of the Food and Drug Administration, led by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rex Tugwell, are packing a little surprise dynamite of their own if the opposition gets too hot or persistent.

As their cleverest maneuver of all so far, opponents of the revised food and drug act have dusted off a bill passed in 1919 which says no administrative agency of the government may spend money in an effort to influence Congressional legislation.

This hamstrings the publicity department of the Food and Drug Administration. They're afraid the cost of some mimeographed press statement may be charged against them as a violation of the law.

PHONY

The patent medicine boys are busily engaged in educating the public on what they consider the bill's greatest menace. They say it will deprive us of all of the right of self-medication and drive us to the doctor. Then we'll get bills a lot higher than packaged medicines on the drugstore shelf.

They further say passage of the act will menace the jobs of 2,000,000 men.

Food and Drug officials retort that no one will be deprived of packaged medicine so long as it tells the truth about itself on the label and in newspaper, magazine and radio advertising.

As for the 2,000,000 men apt to lose jobs they say they can't imagine that many are employed in manufacturing and selling phony goods.

When Senator Copeland calls his committee to order he'll be opening a show worth seeing.

It is going to be hotly contested. Dramatics will be injected by both sides.

And the bill's fate affects all of us.

UN-SUGARED

Washington and New York have had an unofficial and nervous visitor recently in the person of Cuban Secretary of Agriculture Hevia.

Hevia wore a path between Wall Street and the seat of government trying to find out what America was going to do about sugar.

He had heard rumors Uncle Sam was going to curtail sugar importations or demand a correlation between production and consumption—or both. Should he hold down Cuba's production or let it run full blast?

When Secretary Hevia went to the Agricultural Department here he didn't get a whole lot of satisfaction He was referred to the State Department.

After explaining his mission to the gentlemen of state he had the satisfaction of listening to one of them 'phone Agriculture and ask just what was going to be done about Cuban sugar.

"You tell us what's going to happen politically in Cuba," came the response, "and we can answer the question.

That was a poser. Hevia still hasn't an answer.

Officials of the Agriculture Department privately doubt whether the Grau San Martin government could control sugar production even if it tried.

Their scouts say Grau is in control of Havana but none too strong in the provinces where the cane is raised.

DAMAGES

Look shortly for a move by Civil Works Administration to apply a form of workmen's compensation insurance to the 4,000,000 it expects to have in made jobs by February 1.

Administrator Harry Hopkins doesn't want to have that many men subject to possible injury and let them hold the government liable for full damages.

Forty-four states have workers' compensation acts. Something similar probably will be blanketed on this newest army of re-employed.

SWAP

Although a great show of heated bargaining is being made reports from behind the drop curtain indicate trade reciprocity negotiations between the United States and Great Britain are proceeding quite amicably.

From this point of observation mutual concessions will be made whereby England takes our raw materials such as cotton, wheat, tobacco and petroleum, in exchange for which we agree to ease up on such competing exports as autos, machinery, iron and steel goods.

No hair is flying in the negotiations. Of course England would like a definite debt revision, arguing that would give her more money to buy our goods.

DODGERS

Not many people notice it but all the Senate Banking Committee disclosures of income tax phenagling by the big shots dates before 1931.

In that year Vice-President Garner—then Speaker—put through a provision preventing the sale of capital assets for the purpose of charging a loss against income. This was the prize trick for dodging taxes.

A lot of folks around Washington who should know it are talking out loud about legislation to stop such a practice and it's already on the books.

NOTES

Republicans are getting ready for a field day when Congress reassembles in January....Vigorous attack on the president's monetary policy will feature their sniping at the administration....Maybe our observers don't know their British politics but they say the conflict between leaders in London is growing daily....They predict a general election and a clean sweep by the first of the year.

RUSSIA

All sorts of plans to finance the Soviet trade we hope to get are being developed underground The main idea seems to be to pass the buck to Uncle Sam for as much as he will take.

Original visions of one hundred per cent government financing via the RFC are out but it is probable that the RFC will indirectly assume a contingent risk for part of the credit extended. The most likely outcome is an RFC guarantee of manufacturers' costs—leaving the manufacturers to take a chance on collecting their profit.

The Soviet government is not at all disturbed because its credit is hawked at a discount abroad. On the contrary they find it a useful way to save money. They have developed an especially skillful technique in Germany where they buy in their own notes at a 20 to 30 per cent discount and pay them off in blocked marks for a total saving of nearly 50 per cent. It might be quite a catastrophe to Soviet purchasing plans if their credit were suddenly rated A1.

The Russian government has taken great care never to default on its foreign commercial obligations. The best estimates say this commercial debt has been reduced from $500,000,000 to $350,000,000 in the past two years.

TRADE

If Andy Mellon's aluminum company thinks it has a swell new market in Russia it is in for a shock. The Russians expect to produce enough aluminum themselves with Dnieprostroi power to compete actively with Uncle Andy all over the world.

Our copper producers will have a temporary boom until the Ural mines get going. Then we'll have trouble selling any more.

GENERALSHIP

New York credits Secretary Ickes with smart generalship in his handling of the oil price-fixing row.

A hearing last week would have meant bitter argument between irreconcilable factions. The Independent Oil Companies Alliance of America—composed of the smaller producers—was prepared to deliver a carload of witnesses to prove that price-fixing was all wet and would smack the consumer in the eye. Some of the big companies which favor production control were also ready to make a noise.

So Ickes has decided to give production control advocates 90 days to show their plan will work. If it does, O. K. If not, price-fixing is next on the bill of fare.

The next part of it is that price-fixing will be much easier to administer in 90 days than it would be now because of rising spring consumption. Hence postponing its trial gives it a better break.

GOLDMAN

The letter which Henry Goldman jr. recently wrote to the senate investigating committee admitting the necessity for federal regulation of the stock exchange caused a greater commotion on the Big Board than the recent tear gas bomb explosion. The resentment among brokers at the "treason" by a member of the exchange is terrific.

Two hours after the contents of the letter became known young Goldman—who is a specialist and "runs the book" on certain oil stocks—had lost half of his accounts. On the following day most of his remaining regular business vanished. Of course exchange officials had nothing to do with this punishment.

FORESIGHT

Partners of about 15 stock exchange houses got together at a very private meeting last week to discuss the future outlook for the securities business. Throughout the conference the atmosphere was exceedingly gloomy.

Finally the majority of those present agreed to meet again six months hence. If things don't look any brighter by then they want to talk over a possible merger of their firms—in some other field of business.

OPIUM

An American delegate to the advisory commission on the opium and drug traffic in Geneva recently accused Japan of encouraging increased opium production in Manchukuo. He stressed as proof the fact that Manchukuo coins bear an opium poppy, that airplanes have dropped pamphlets urging inhabitants of the eastern provinces and Jehol to cultivate the poppy, and the significant halving of taxes formerly levied by the Chinese government on opium fields. A European firm operating in Persia is chartering ships to transport narcotics to Manchukuo contrary to Chinese law.

INSULL

Word received here makes it look as if Samuel Insull is planning to start all over again in Greece. After the Greek court of Appeals rejected the U. S. extradition plea Mr. Insull remarked: "I will try by some financial combinations to reciprocate the hospitality of this small but great country."

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE A FOOTBALL REFEREE

M. J. ("MIKE") THOMPSON, FAMOUS FOOTBALL REFEREE

IF YOU WANT TO SEE nerve strain, look at "Mike" Thompson's job — refereeing two tons of football brawn, seeing every detail, but never getting in the players' way. "Mike" Thompson has been a steady smoker for years. "I'm open-minded on cigarettes," he says, "but I've got to keep my nerves in shape, so I stick to Camels."

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

M. J. ("Mike") Thompson, football's most famous referee, has to keep his nerves healthy. He says:

"Because nothing can be allowed to interfere with healthy nerves I smoke Camels. I have tried them all—given every popular brand a chance to show what it can offer. Camels don't upset my nerves even when I smoke constantly. And the longer I smoke them the more I come to appreciate their mildness and rich flavor."

Many smokers who have changed to Camels report that their nerves are no longer irritable . . . "jumpy." Switch to Camels yourself. You will find that Camels do not jangle your nerves—or tire your taste.

New Well Flows 3000 Barrels; Japanese Seeking Leases

COUNTY GROUP INTERESTED IN H. B. PROJECT

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 27—The Sierra Oil company's well on Eighteenth street between Ocean and Walnut blew in at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, flowing two million cubic feet of gass and 3000 barrels of oil daily.

Joe Rogers, E. E. Fairbanks, J. Brain and others, composing a group of oil workers and supply house men, own the new well, the second producer on a lease on a single lot, 40 feet wide and 117 1-2 feet deep. The first well on this site is a pumper, doing about 500 barrels a day as a potential.

The Monarch Refinery company is said to have leased a group of lots on Sixteenth street between Walnut and Olive, and will start a well there this week. W. T. Lambert is one of the chief owners of the drill site, with Orange county men owning the entire royalty interest. The Monarch Refinery company is headed by C. W. Fourl, of Los Angeles, an attorney and oil operator.

Japanese oil interests are reported to be negotiating for several leases in the town lot field with a view of producing oil for export. It is said they will start a well this week on Seventeenth street at the corner of Olive and will within a few weeks start at least three additional wells. Although the crude oil is said to be for export use only, the wells will have to go on curtailment the same as other wells in the field, taking their regular allotment under government supervision and NRA plan.

For the past several days government agents have been in the field here, according to oil men, checking the movement of trucks carrying oil tanks out of the field. The truck tankers are not being stopped or molested in any way, but the government men take the truck and trailer license numbers, also the location of the tanks and wells from which the oil is being taken.

Charges are being made that bootleg oil, or oil produced out of curtailment, is being moved out of the field in trucks. Many oil men deny that bootleg oil is being moved, pointing out that since the company having pipe line facilities were forced to quit buying oil on account of the state suit, it became necessary to move the oil out in trucks. Moving 10,000 to 18,000 barrels in truck and trailer loads of 100 barrels to the load, means that a large number of trucks and trailers must move in and out of this city to the Long Beach and Los Angeles refineries daily.

TUSTIN, Nov. 27. — Approximately 90 persons attended the benefit card party sponsored by the Tustin Pythian Sisters Friday night in the Knights of Pythias hall. BREA MINISTER SAYS PEOPLE TAKE BLESSINGS FOR GRANTED

BREA, Nov. 27.—Taking for his text, Luke 18:43, "And all the people when they saw it gave praise unto God," the Rev. Donald F. Gaylord preached a Thanksgiving sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning.

"Such response," said the pastor, "was but the natural re-action of religious people and a habit which the world is fast forgetting. The custom of our forefathers in giving thanks for our daily bread and in beginning the day with family devotionals is found in but few homes today and when they are obseved, are too often done in a prefunctory manner that holds but little of real thankfulness.

"We take our blessings too much for granted. We turn on a tap for our water, we snap on our lights, we get our heat by turning on the gas and applying a match, we shop for our food and clothing and other necessities of life and we are prone to believe that this manner of exchange is between men alone and forget to thank God for such blessings.

"If we had to wait each morning for God to bring to our door the food for our table that day, if we could see Him restore to health our loved ones and accept from His hands the thousands of blessings which we take as a matter of fact each day, we should not forget to thank Him. Because we cannot actually see His work with our physical eyes is that any reason why we should not thank him?"

SCOUT LEADERS GIVE TALKS AT DINNER AFFAIR

PLACENTIA, Nov. 27.—The total cost of the Boy Scout work in Orange county does not total the cost of caring for 14 boys who are in California state institutions for correction, and the need of preventative care of boys is based on an economic as well as a moral standard, Harrison White, in charge of Boy Scout work in Orange county, told 130 guests at the Boy Scout benefit dinner Friday night at Placentia American Legion hall.

The dinner, given under the American Legion post, was a marked success, and included as part of the program, entertainment by the Sherman institute Boy Scouts.

This troop took into their patrol, H. E. Douglas, Scoutmaster of Placentia; Alvin Koenig, assistant master, and Roy Hill, patrol leader.

The complete program included a dinner, over which George Kellogg presided. C. J. Carlson, regional executive, talked on the character and personality building of scouting. Dr. Frank Dowling pronounced the invocation.

After dinner, the guests assembled in the Legion assembly room, where the program continued in a setup that corresponded with a camporal. GASOLINE COMPANY TO BUILD ABSORPTION PLANT AT BEACH

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 27.—The O. C. Field Gasoline company has been issued a building permit for the construction of a gasoline absorption plant between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets and Acacia and Palm avenues. The plant will cost $60,000 including the new 10-inch and 20-inch gas mains to be laid in the field from the big gassers to the new plant.

The gas lines will operate on a well pressure plan, the gas flowing directly from the big wells into the absorption plant. In this way the entire output of wet gas from the wells will be marketed, adding a large sum to the profits of the operators.

The construction work on plant and pipe lines will provide work for about 100 men during its installation. The O. C. Field company has recently purchased half a block of lots as a site for the plant and has optioned the other half of the block. News Of Orange County Communities

COUNTY GROUP INTERESTED IN H. B. PROJECT

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 27—The Sierra Oil company's well on Eighteenth street between Ocean and Walnut blew in at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, flowing two million cubic feet of gass and 3000 barrels of oil daily.

Joe Rogers, E. E. Fairbanks, J. Brain and others, composing a group of oil workers and supply house men, own the new well, the second producer on a lease on a single lot, 40 feet wide and 117 1-2 feet deep. The first well on this site is a pumper, doing about 500 barrels a day as a potential.

The Monarch Refinery company is said to have leased a group of lots on Sixteenth street between Walnut and Olive, and will start a well there this week. W. T. Lambert is one of the chief owners of the drill site, with Orange county men owning the entire royalty interest. The Monarch Refinery company is headed by C. W. Fourl, of Los Angeles, an attorney and oil operator.

Japanese oil interests are reported to be negotiating for several leases in the town lot field with a view of producing oil for export. It is said they will start a well this week on Seventeenth street at the corner of Olive and will within a few weeks start at least three additional wells. Although the crude oil is said to be for export use only, the wells will have to go on curtailment the same as other wells in the field, taking their regular allotment under government supervision and NRA plan.

For the past several days government agents have been in the field here, according to oil men, checking the movement of trucks carrying oil tanks out of the field. The truck tankers are not being stopped or molested in any way, but the government men take the truck and trailer license numbers, also the location of the tanks and wells from which the oil is being taken.

Charges are being made that bootleg oil, or oil produced out of curtailment, is being moved out of the field in trucks. Many oil men deny that bootleg oil is being moved, pointing out that since the company having pipe line facilities were forced to quit buying oil on account of the state suit, it became necessary to move the oil out in trucks. Moving 10,000 to 18,000 barrels in truck and trailer loads of 100 barrels to the load, means that a large number of trucks and trailers must move in and out of this city to the Long Beach and Los Angeles refineries daily.

BREA MINISTER SAYS PEOPLE TAKE BLESSINGS FOR GRANTED

BREA, Nov. 27.—Taking for his text, Luke 18:43, "And all the people when they saw it gave praise unto God," the Rev. Donald F. Gaylord preached a Thanksgiving sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning.

"Such response," said the pastor, "was but the natural re-action of religious people and a habit which the world is fast forgetting. The custom of our forefathers in giving thanks for our daily bread and in beginning the day with family devotionals is found in but few homes today and when they are obseved, are too often done in a prefunctory manner that holds but little of real thankfulness.

"We take our blessings too much for granted. We turn on a tap for our water, we snap on our lights, we get our heat by turning on the gas and applying a match, we shop for our food and clothing and other necessities of life and we are prone to believe that this manner of exchange is between men alone and forget to thank God for such blessings.

"If we had to wait each morning for God to bring to our door the food for our table that day, if we could see Him restore to health our loved ones and accept from His hands the thousands of blessings which we take as a matter of fact each day, we should not forget to thank Him. Because we cannot actually see His work with our physical eyes is that any reason why we should not thank him?"

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Ray Morrison of S. M. U. is the latest rumored successor to Hunk Anderson at Notre Dame . . . and Gus Dorais is "sure" to get Sam Willaman's job at Ohio State . . . with George Pfann, former Cornell star and now Swarthmore mentor, succeeding Gil Dobie at Cornell. . . . Yes, yes! . . . Speaking of iron men of football . . . Jay Berwanger, University of Chicago back, has played every minute of the Maroons' five Big Ten games. . . . Those same Maroons have a freshman football player 33 years old who played with the Great Lakes eleven in 1919 . . . the name is Donald Patterson.

HITHER AND THITHER

Annual joint meeting of the major leagues will be held in Chicago, Dec. 14. And if the lively ball isn't the main topic of discussion, it should be.

For some years now we've been suffering from too much argument on this subject. American League hurlers, who use the lively ball, blast it to the depths of the inferno, while the batters praise it to the high heavens.

National League hurlers, who leave a ball some 20 per cent less lively, wouldn't part with it for the world with a little red fence around it. The old circuit's sluggers would part with their winter flannels just to see it go.

JUST A SUGGESTION

The reason for this difference of opinion is that the lively ball in the American League makes for more hits and less effective pitching, while the deader ball in the National loop has just the opposite effect.

The happy medium seems to be to conduct a transfusion whereby 50 per cent of that lively stuff in the American League ball is withdrawn and injected into the veins of the National circuit pellet. This would even things all around.

By standardizing this ball all over the country, the big leagues would realize another benefit—they could shop for minor league stars and judge their wares on the basis of a uniform ball.

Here lately, bush league phenoms have been elevated to major league status on a .375 batting average in the sticks. When they hit the majors, especially the National League, they slump dismally with the willow. The reason is that they batted a far more lively ball in the minors and, when they ran up against a deader ball, they couldn't pound the horsehide with such ferocity.

CHANGING THE SUBJECT

All this talk about de-emphasizing football defense and concentrating more on offense seems to be the bunk.

The reason for such close scores in present-day football seems to be the equal strength of teams. When you get a good team playing a lot of weaker opponents, you still get those box-car figure scores.

Davis-Elkins, with 372 points against a total opponents' score of 31, illustrates this. And Davis-Elkins played such teams as Salem, Morris-Harvey, Langley Field, West Liberty, New River, and Albright.

When this squad went up against West Virginia, however, the score was 7-7. That illustrates the point.

MILKS MULE DURING WORK

NEWPORT, Texas. (UP) — Although Farmer John Clifton has to stop and milk his mule during a day's plowing, he believes the animal worthy of her hay. The mule has given milk like a Jersey cow for months, declares Clifton, whose barn has attracted many visitors.

ROBINSON IS DEFEATED BY FORMER CHAMP

Eddie Holmes, five years a champion, ruled the Santa Ana Country club links again today after defeating A. W. Robinson, 5 to 4, in the final round of the annual championship play yesterday. It was Robinson's first appearance in the annual playoff.

Missing short putts cost Robinson the match, Holmes' superior putting resulting in a win for him. At the end of the first nine, after a ragged round, Robinson was one up. In the second nine of the first 18 holes, Holmes had a 36, even par, to finish 2 up, and at the end of the third nine Robinson was four down.

The match finished on the 32nd hole with Holmes 5 up and 4 to play. A feature of the match play was that only four holes were halved on first 18. On number 12 Holmes' second shot landed the ball inches from the pin and he nearly holed out for an eagle.

Robinson made a fine shot out of the corner of a deep trap on the 13th hole. Forced to stand on the bank, he lifted the ball out of the sand and it stopped about three feet from the pin. He missed the putt, which, if he had made it, would have halved the hole and given him a better chance to win.

In the final second flight, W. O. Young defeated J. R. Huber 2 and 1. Dr. W. E. Watkins beat Chester Dale one up on the 19th hole in the third flight. M. M. Thompson beat J. K. McDonald in the final defeated flight.

Leroy Burns won over Harry Oleson, 2 and 1, in the provisional member championship and Van Pomeroy beat B. McPhee 1 up. Dean Campbell won over Bill Adams 2 and 1 and Paul Wallace won from T. R. Griffith by default. In the first flight for provisional members, results were: J. K. Newman beat Paul Hale 2 up, R. M. Conklin won over Art Anderson, 2 and 1; Dee Whitney won by default from George Osterman; R. W. Weston beat J. F. Parsons 1 up; Ernest Byron won from W. H. Wright; Robert Spurgeon beat L. W. Pettitt 5 and 4; Jack Colburn won over Robert Miller.

Results of the Saturday sweepstakes were: F. E. Farnsworth and Lew Wallace, 74-10-64; T. B. Talbert and H. Overmier, 78-13-65; Ed Holmes and L. D. Coffing, 73-6-67. Sunday sweepstakes results were: L. D. Coffing, 79-10-69; Van Pomeroy, 84-14-70; Don Jerome, 85-15-70.

NEWPORT TEAM IN WIN OVER COMPTON

"Moon" Mullins, Newport Harbor pitcher, threw a no-hit ball game until the second out in the ninth inning to win easily from the Compton nine yesterday. The score was 7 to 1.

The Newport team scored five runs in the first inning to sew up the ball game. Gibson, hurling for the visitors, settled down after the one fatal inning.

Warburton In Lead For Scores Made

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Irvine (Cotton) Warburton's two touchdowns against Notre Dame Saturday boosted him into first place among the Pacific Coast conference football scorers.

The little Southern California quarterback supplanted his running-mate, Bill Howard, with a total of 54 points. Howard who didn't break into the lineup Saturday, was left in second place with 45 points. Arleigh Williams, University of California halfback, kicked a field goal against Stanford to add three points and hold third position with 44 points. Other leading scorers include W. Smith, Washington, end, 32 points; W. Smith, Idaho quarterback, Homer Griffith Southern California quarterfullback, and Mike Mikulak, Oregon fullback, each 30 points.

STANFORD AND PRINCETON MAY MEET IN BOWL

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—(INS)—Stanford vs. Princeton!

That was the prospect today for the annual New Year's Day game in the Pasadena Rose Bowl following Stanford's selection as the Pacific Coast representative with the privilege of naming its eastern opponent.

Although arrangements have not been completed it was generally believed on the Pacific Coast that Yale would waive an agreement with Princeton that theirs should be the last game for both teams in order that Princeton, if invited, could play in the Rose Bowl.

Army, likewise undefeated, was another eastern probability, together with Duke, also undefeated, and Michigan whose seasonal record is blotted only by the scoreless tie game with Minnesota.

Stanford was invited by the Rose Bowl committee and accepted the invitation following its sensational 7-3 victory over the University of California before 90,000 spectators at Palo Alto.

Although the University of Southern California was reported "shocked" over the invitation to Stanford, the committee agreed that Stanford's victories over both U. S. C. and California gave the Cardinals the edge.

In event Princeton is unable to accept Stanford's probable invitation it was reported that political wheels already are being turned to bring Army westward if the Cadets defeat Notre Dame Saturday.

TODAY'S SPORT PARADE GIVEN BY McLEMORE

BY HENRY McLEMORE

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Putting the sports shot here and there: Dr. J. F. Donehoo, W. and J. football physician, saw the presidents play their 200th consecutive game Saturday....He hasn't missed a game in 20 years ....Most wrestlers just about get coffee and cake money, but Gamma, the gigantic Indian favorite of the Maharajah of Patiala was given a huge estate and 1000 servants by his patron....Gamma was plenty tough, too, throwing Stanislaus Zbyszko in 10 seconds.... only one American has ever formally lifted twice his own weight overhead....Art Levan, who weighs about 130, did it....Try it some time....

Not one American pitcher won his 1933 series from each of the seven clubs he faced....Lefty Grove of the A's and Earl Whitehill of Washington came closest winning six and splitting one.... No one gives Pat McDonald the credit he deserves....The grand old fellow is still the best 56-pound hammer thrower in the world although he must be 55.... A fighter is usually through at 30, but old Tennessee, a lumberjack, ruled the Canadian north woods with an iron fist before the war and was reliably reported in his 80's....Maxie Rosenbloom, the light-heavyweight champ, is reported to have accepted a job as night club master of ceremonies ....Luis Guitteriez, who maneuvered Kid Chocolate into a championship and big money, started life as a postoffice clerk....Luis, by the way, would seem to be pretty smart in getting rid of the washed-up Kid's contract for $25,000....

Boxers are a superstitious lot ....Tom Sharkey would fight only in green trunks, Terry McGovern always went into a fight with one shoe unlaced and insisted on slipping off the loose shoe just before the bell and spitting in it ....Dempsey never shaved for days before a fight, Benny Leonard always insisted that his parents accompany him to the arena where he was boxing and then go home, and Phil Scott always moaned softly at the count of eight....as far back as the Civil war the citizens had the lowdown on boxing....the New York Herald of November 14, 1869, starts a fight report this way: "A barbarous encounter took place at Newark yesterday," and closes in this manner: "It is to be regretted that none of the scoundrels were arrested"....Pat Malone, Chicago's efficient and belligerent pitcher, says it doesn't matter how much stuff a pitcher has, it's the breaks that decide the game ....Maxie Rosenbloom just called to say that he would marry the daughter or a French champagne king before the year was out....

Bill Own and Steve Clancy of the New York Giants pro football team, are undertakers in the offseason....Pete Bostwick, America's foremost gentleman rider, will have Mate and Chenango entered in next year's grand national....Pete probably will have a leg upon Mate....

Saturday's Results
Santa Ana 7, Long Beach 6.
Pasadena 7, San Diego 7.

Before a crowd of 6500 fans, who were treated to one of the best high school football games of the season, Pasadena's Bulldogs and San Diego's Hilltoppers finished in a 7-7 deadlock at Pasadena Saturday to wind up their Coast Preparatory league schedule tied for the championship.

Coaches Hobbs Adams of San Diego and John Thurman of Pasadena, their teams having won three games and tied two, have agreed to a playoff, which in all probability will be held Thursday or Saturday afternoon. No official arrangements have been completed today.

After three-quarters of scoreless argument, Ambrose Schindler, elusive quarterback, crossed the goal from the 12-yard line for San Diego's touchdown on the opening play of the final period, and Oliver Day added the extra point on a place kick.

The Hilltop lead of 7-0 stood until the final two minutes of play, when Pasadena responded with a desperate passing attack. From San Diego's 35-yard line Halfback Bob Layng, Coast league football throw champion, faded back and un' ashed a long pass into the end zone, where Harry Acquarelli, Bulldog safety, hauled it down. Hal Burt, substitute halfback, tied the score with a neat conversion kick.

While San Diego and Pasadena were fighting for the lead, Coach Bill Foote's Santa Ana Saints were downing Long Beach, 7-6, on the beach gridiron to end their season with two victories, three defeats.

JAYSEE RIVALS CLASH AT BOWL HERE THURSDAY

For the past six seasons, ever since A. J. ("Bill") Cook began his coaching career at Santa Ana Junior college, the Dons have been embarrassed in football relations with Fullerton, the Orange county rival they must defeat at the Bowl Thursday afternoon to win the Eastern conference title.

Coach Art Nunn's Yellowjackets have scored four victories and a tie in the past six meetings with Santa Ana. They lost only in 1929, when the Dons, on a forward pass over the goal after the final gun had sounded, defeated Fullerton 19-13 to win the Southern California championship. Their rivals led at the half, 13-0.

Fullerton welcomed Cook as Santa Ana's new coach in '27 with a 6-0 victory over the Dons, then returned in '28 to bury the Cookmen, 20-6. Following Santa Ana's sensational 19-13 win in '29, the traditional rivals fought to a 13-13 deadlock, but the '30 game was a decisive moral victory for Fullerton. In 1931 it was a 19-12 victory for the Yellowjackets.

Definite proof that Fullerton enjoys winning from the Dons was shown last year on its own grid, when Coach Nunn's fighting eleven came from behind a 13-0 lead in the final nine minutes of play to defeat Santa Ana, 14-13. A trick conversion from a passing formation adding the winning point.

Nothing but a victory will do the Dons any good against Fullerton this week. They must defeat the Yellowjackets for the championship, a loss or tie giving Riverside the title provided the Bengals upset Chaffey at Ontario Thursday afternoon. If Fullerton and Chaffey win from Santa Ana and Riverside, respectively, Citrus and Chaffey will be tied for the '33 pennant with four victories, one tie and one defeat.

San Bernardino and Pomona, each defeated five consecutive times, meet at San Bernardino Thursday in a fight to keep out of the cellar. San Bernardino's superior offense will install the Indians a two-touchdown favorite over Coach I. H. Van Cleave's weak Pomona team.

Awaiting their Southland playoff game with the winner of the Eastern conference, the Los Angeles Cubs, Western division champions, collide with Taft Junior college in Los Angeles Thursday afternoon. The Southern California playoff has been set for December 9, although no site has been selected.

Schulte Wins Willowick Golf Tourney

Twenty-two holes of tight golf were played yesterday afternoon before Stanley Schulte beat Frank Osborne in the annual fall tournament at Willowick Golf course in the final round.

The two golfers finished the slated 18 holes tied up, and went on for four more holes. On the 22nd hole, Schulte shot a birdie to win while Osborne parred the hole. Schulte shot a 76 and Osborne took a 77.

In the first flight Joe Bushard defeated George Walker on the 19th hole. Sidney Harris beat Chappie Townsend 3 and 2 in the defeated eight first flight, and Cecil Gibbs won over Larry Jadlo 3 and 1, in the defeated eight second flight.

GRID RESULTS SUMMED UP BY UNITED PRESS

(By United Press)

Stanford University's sensational football team, comprised mainly of sophomores, was chosen to represent the west in the annual Rose Bowl game at Pasadena New Year's day as a result of its 7-3 victory over California in a big game" that preserved every tradition of the west coast's greatest classic.

A 60-yard forward pass play which stunned 86,000 rabidly partisan fans provided the winning score in a close, hard fought game in which California had held the lead until the final quarter. Frank Alustiza, Stanford sophomore, tossed the pass to Al Norgard, senior end, Norgard eluded the California safety man to run 35 yards for the winning touchdown. Bill Corbus, All-American guard of the victors, added the extra point.

California's score was the result of a 25-yard placement kick by Arleigh Williams, left halfback, in the second quarter.

The fans had hardly settled in their seats after Stanford's score when California started a dramatic drive goalward. With power plays and a long pass, the Californians advanced to the Stanford four-yard line. Three plays were stopped. The Californians tried the aerial route. Stewart, Golden Bear quarterback, reached for the ball at the goal line but Bob Hamilton, Stanford halfback, cut in front of him. Hamilton snatched the oval and sped 60 yards downfield to end the scoring threat.

The victory earned Stanford a tie with Oregon in the coast conference standings, gave them their first win in three seasons over California and marked their first scoring on the same team over the same period.

Washington State preserved its home field tradition by defeating University of Washington, 17-6. Phil Sarboe, Washington State quarterback, led his team to victory in maintaining the team's record of never having lost a home game since Babe Hollingberry became coach several years ago.

St. Mary's of Moraga rolled up 22 points over U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles in the last-half finish which made the final score 22-14. George Wilson and Kellogg scored St. Mary's touchdowns on line plunges. A 74-yard pass play, Reel to Lott, and Murphy's 45-yard run after intercepting a pass gave the Bruins their scores.

Southern California, led by the great "Cotton" Warburton, scored a 19-0 victory over Notre Dame at South Bend.

On Sunday the Olympic club closed its season by unexpectedly defeating University of San Francisco, 13-9.

WILMINGTON AND WESTERN GAS TIE

Called at the end of the ninth inning on account of darkness, a Winter league baseball game between Santa Ana's Western Gas nine and Wilmington resulted in a 6-6 tie at Wilmington yesterday. It was the second tie of the season for the Santa Ana club, which broke even with Lomita, 8-8, in a game halted by darkness the preceding week.

Santa Ana earned a 4-0 lead in the fourth inning, pushed across two runs in the sixth. Wilmington scored in the fifth, sixth and seventh, and took advantage of two errors in the ninth to tie the score.

Lindsey, left fielder; Cook, short stop; and Farley, third baseman, gathered two hits each for the Santa Anans. Joe Koral, lanky second baseman, clouted a home run in the fourth inning.

SAINTS TAKE TO AIR TO WIN FINAL BATTLE

BY KENNETH ADAMS

Santa Ana's Saints high school football team took the bow as the curtain fell on the 1933 Coast League football season Saturday by coming from behind to launch a brilliant air attack against the Long Beach Poly high school eleven to win the last game of the season, 7 to 6, on Burcham Field, Long Beach.

The game distinctly was an upset, the Jackrabbit team having been favored to win, judging from past performances of the two high school teams.

While the game meant nothing as far as the league title was concerned, it proved one thing—that the Saints could play a good game of football, erratically.

The score was 6 to 0 with the Long Beach team on the heavy side of the scoreboard at the end of the half, but the determined Saints came back in the third quarter with an aerial attack that caught the Jackrabbits flat-footed and overhauled the beach eleven to score the winning touchdown and conversion.

Although Long Beach outgained the Santa Ana team with a yardage gain total of 127 to 101 yards from scrimmage, the forward wall of the Saint team held the reputed strong offensive attack at critical times.

Six points were scored by the Jackrabbits early in the first quarter after a poor kick by Stranske which went out of bounds on the Santa Ana 20-yard line. The Saint line held the Jackrabbit backfield for a gain of only one yard in two plays, after which John Carter, Long Beach passer, faded back and shot a 16-yard pass to Moore, who was downed on the Saint four-yard marker.

It took two plays for the Long Beach eleven to get to the three-yard line when Woodruff went over for a touchdown through tackle. Parker's attempted kick for conversion went wide.

After a deadlock most of the second quarter, Santa Ana unleashed an aerial attack in the third quarter which ended the game right there—although nobody knew it at the time. Undiscouraged after seven unsuccessful passes, the Saint passes started to click when one of Hendrie's several tosses connected for a gain of 31 yards, putting the ball on the Long Beach 29-yard line where the half ended the scoring threat.

Continuing the successful passing tactics in the third period, the Saints went right down the field for a touchdown. Taking the ball on their own 20-yard line, Santa Ana launched a touchdown drive good for 80 yards and a score. Newton converted to win the game for the Saints. Six passes were thrown during the drive, the last pass thrown by Hendrie to Webb was good for 31 yards.

The Jackrabbits came back determinedly to threaten in the fourth quarter, but to no avail. The Long Beach team took the ball about 45 yards in two plays, but lost the ball. Santa Ana kicked out of danger and the game ended before the Long Beach eleven could get the ball back into scoring territory.

Out of 19 games in the Saint-Jackrabbit series, Santa Ana now has won eight games against six for its opponents. Five of the grid games have ended in ties.

In a curtain-raising event, the "B" team from the beach city did better than their heavier teammates to win from Santa Ana, 8 to 7. The Jackrabbit team scored late in the fourth period on a safety to win on Burcham Field.

The Sain team scored in the first quarter when Meserve crashed over the nine-yard stripe for a touchdown after a drive of 52 yards. Burns, Long Beach quarterback, went around left end and streaked 55 yards for a touchdown. The safety was scored when Brooks, Saint quarter, stepped out of the end zone when attempting to get away a punt from behind his own goal line, giving Long Beach the two winning points, for a safety.

Lineups for the main event were:

HITHER AND THITHER

Annual joint meeting of the major leagues will be held in Chicago, Dec. 14. And if the lively ball isn't the main topic of discussion, it should be.

For some years now we've been suffering from too much argument on this subject. American League hurlers, who use the lively ball, blast it to the depths of the interno, while the batters praise it to the high heavens.

National League hurlers, who leave a ball some 20 per cent less lively, wouldn't part with it for the world with a little red fence around it. The old circuit's sluggers would part with their winter flannels just to see it go.

JUST A SUGGESTION

The reason for this difference of opinion is that the lively ball in the American League makes for more hits and less effective pitching, while the deader ball in the National loop has just the opposite effect.

The happy medium seems to be to conduct a transfusion whereby 50 per cent of that lively stuff in the American League ball is withdrawn and injected into the veins of the National circuit pellet. This would even things all around.

By standardizing this ball all over the country, the big leagues would realize another benefit—they could shop for minor league stars and judge their wares on the basis of a uniform ball.

Here lately, bush league phenoms have been elevated to major league status on a .375 batting average in the sticks. When they hit the majors, especially the National League, they slump dismally with the willow. The reason is that they batted a far more lively ball in the minors and, when they ran up against a deader ball, they couldn't pound the horsehide with such ferocity.

CHANGING THE SUBJECT

All this talk about de-emphasizing football defense and concentrating more on offense seems to be the bunk.

The reason for such close scores in present-day football seems to be the equal strength of teams. When you get a good team playing a lot of weaker opponents, you still get those box-car figure scores.

Davis-Elkins, with 372 points against a total opponents' score of 31, illustrates this. And Davis-Elkins played such teams as Salem, Morris-Harvey, Langley Field, West Liberty, New River, and Albright.

When this squad went up against West Virginia, however, the score was 7-7. That illustrates the point.

Holmes Wins Golf Championship

ROBINSON IS DEFEATED BY FORMER CHAMP

Eddie Holmes, five years a champion, ruled the Santa Ana Country club links again today after defeating A. W. Robinson, 5 to 4, in the final round of the annual championship play yesterday. It was Robinson's first appearance in the annual playoff.

Missing short putts cost Robinson the match, Holmes' superior putting resulting in a win for him. At the end of the first nine, after a ragged round, Robinson was one up. In the second nine of the first 18 holes, Holmes had a 36, even par, to finish 2 up, and at the end of the third nine Robinson was four down.

The match finished on the 32nd hole with Holmes 5 up and 4 to play. A feature of the match play was that only four holes were halved on first 18. On number 12 Holmes' second shot landed the ball inches from the pin and he nearly holed out for an eagle.

Robinson made a fine shot out of the corner of a deep trap on the 13th hole. Forced to stand on the bank, he lifted the ball out of the sand and it stopped about three feet from the pin. He missed the putt, which, if he had made it, would have halved the hole and given him a better chance to win.

In the final second flight, W. O. Young defeated J. R. Huber 2 and 1. Dr. W. E. Watkins beat Chester Dale one up on the 19th hole in the third flight. M. M. Thompson beat J. K. McDonald in the final defeated flight.

Leroy Burns won over Harry Oleson, 2 and 1, in the provisional member championship and Van Pomeroy beat B. McPhee 1 up. Dean Campbell won over Bill Adams 2 and 1 and Paul Wallace won from T. R. Griffith by default. In the first flight for provisional members, results were: J. K. Newman beat Paul Hale 2 up, R. M. Conklin won over Art Anderson, 2 and 1; Dee Whitney won by default from George Osterman; R. W. Weston beat J. F. Parsons 1 up; Ernest Byron won from W. H. Wright; Robert Spurgeon beat L. W. Pettitt 5 and 4; Jack Colburn won over Robert Miller.

Results of the Saturday sweepstakes were: F. E. Farnsworth and Lew Wallace, 74-10-64; T. B. Talbert and H. Overmier, 78-13-65; Ed Holmes and L. D. Coffing, 73-6-67. Sunday sweepstakes results were: L. D. Coffing, 79-10-69; Van Pomeroy, 84-14-70; Don Jerome, 85-15-70.

NEWPORT TEAM IN WIN OVER COMPTON

"Moon" Mullins, Newport Harbor pitcher, threw a no-hit ball game until the second out in the ninth inning to win easily from the Compton nine yesterday. The score was 7 to 1.

The Newport team scored five runs in the first inning to sew up the ball game. Gibson, hurling for the visitors, settled down after the one fatal inning.

Warburton In Lead For Scores Made

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Irvine (Cotton) Warburton's two touchdowns against Notre Dame Saturday boosted him into first place among the Pacific Coast conference football scorers.

The little Southern California quarterback supplanted his running-mate, Bill Howard, with a total of 54 points. Howard who didn't break into the lineup Saturday, was left in second place with 45 points. Arleigh Williams, University of California halfback, kicked a field goal against Stanford to add three points and hold third position with 44 points. Other leading scorers include W. Smith, Washington, end, 32 points; W. Smith, Idaho quarterback, Homer Griffith Southern California quarterfullback, and Mike Mikulak, Oregon fullback, each 30 points.

STANFORD AND PRINCETON MAY MEET IN BOWL

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—(INS)—Stanford vs. Princeton!

That was the prospect today for the annual New Year's Day game in the Pasadena Rose Bowl following Stanford's selection as the Pacific Coast representative with the privilege of naming its eastern opponent.

Although arrangements have not been completed it was generally believed on the Pacific Coast that Yale would waive an agreement with Princeton that theirs should be the last game for both teams in order that Princeton, if invited, could play in the Rose Bowl.

Army, likewise undefeated, was another eastern probability, together with Duke, also undefeated, and Michigan whose seasonal record is blotted only by the scoreless tie game with Minnesota.

Stanford was invited by the Rose Bowl committee and accepted the invitation following its sensational 7-3 victory over the University of California before 90,000 spectators at Palo Alto.

Although the University of Southern California was reported "shocked" over the invitation to Stanford, the committee agreed that Stanford's victories over both U. S. C. and California gave the Cardinals the edge.

In event Princeton is unable to accept Stanford's probable invitation it was reported that political wheels already are being turned to bring Army westward if the Cadets defeat Notre Dame Saturday.

Pasadena 7, San Diego 7.

Before a crowd of 6500 fans, who were treated to one of the best high school football games of the season, Pasadena's Bulldogs and San Diego's Hilltoppers finished in a 7-7 deadlock at Pasadena Saturday to wind up their Coast Preparatory league schedule tied for the championship.

Coaches Hobbs Adams of San Diego and John Thurman of Pasadena, their teams having won three games and tied two, have agreed to a playoff, which in all probability will be held Thursday or Saturday afternoon. No official arrangements have been completed today.

After three-quarters of scoreless argument, Ambrose Schindler, elusive quarterback, crossed the goal from the 12-yard line for San Diego's touchdown on the opening play of the final period, and Oliver Day added the extra point on a place kick.

The Hilltop lead of 7-0 stood until the final two minutes of play, when Pasadena responded with a desperate passing attack. From San Diego's 35-yard line Halfback Bob Layng, Coast league football throw champion, faded back and un'ashed a long pass into the end zone, where Harry Acquarelli, Bulldog safety, hauled it down. Hal Burt, substitute halfback, tied the score with a neat conversion kick.

While San Diego and Pasadena were fighting for the lead, Coach Bill Foote's Santa Ana Saints were downing Long Beach, 7-6, on the beach gridiron to end their season with two victories, three defeats.

JAYSEE RIVALS CLASH AT BOWL HERE THURSDAY

For the past six seasons, ever since A. J. ("Bill") Cook began his coaching career at Santa Ana Junior college, the Dons have been embarrassed in football relations with Fullerton, the Orange county rival they must defeat at the Bowl Thursday afternoon to win the Eastern conference title.

Coach Art Nunn's Yellowjackets have scored four victories and a tie in the past six meetings with Santa Ana. They lost only in 1929, when the Dons, on a forward pass over the goal after the final gun had sounded, defeated Fullerton 19-13 to win the Southern California championship. Their rivals led at the half, 13-0.

Fullerton welcomed Cook as Santa Ana's new coach in '27 with a 6-0 victory over the Dons, then returned in '28 to bury the Cookmen, 20-6. Following Santa Ana's sensational 19-13 win in '29, the traditional rivals fought to a 13-13 deadlock, but the '30 game was a decisive moral victory for Fullerton. In 1931 it was a 19-12 victory for the Yellowjackets.

Definite proof that Fullerton enjoys winning from the Dons was shown last year on its own grid, when Coach Nunn's fighting eleven came from behind a 13-0 lead in the final nine minutes of play to defeat Santa Ana, 14-13. A trick conversion from a passing formation adding the winning point.

Nothing but a victory will do the Dons any good against Fullerton this week. They must defeat the Yellowjackets for the championship, a loss or tie giving Riverside the title provided the Bengals upset Chaffey at Ontario Thursday afternoon. If Fullerton and Chaffey win from Santa Ana and Riverside, respectively, Citrus and Chaffey will be tied for the '33 pennant with four victories, one tie and one defeat.

San Bernardino and Pomona, each defeated five consecutive times, meet at San Bernardino Thursday in a fight to keep out of the cellar. San Bernardino's superior offense will install the Indians a two-touchdown favorite over Coach I. H. Van Cleave's weak Pomona team.

Awaiting their Southland playoff game with the winner of the Eastern conference, the Los Angeles Cubs, Western division champions, collide with Taft Junior college in Los Angeles Thursday afternoon. The Southern California playoff has been set for December 9, although no site has been selected.

GRID RESULTS SUMMED UP BY UNITED PRESS

(By United Press)

Stanford University's sensational football team, comprised mainly of sophomores, was chosen to represent the west in the annual Rose Bowl game at Pasadena New Year's day as a result of its 7-3 victory over California in a big game" that preserved every tradition of the west coast's greatest classic.

A 60-yard forward pass play which stunned 86,000 rabidly partisan fans provided the winning score in a close, hard fought game in which California had held the lead until the final quarter. Frank Alustiza, Stanford sophomore, tossed the pass to Al Norgard, senior end, Norgard eluded the California safety man to run 35 yards for the winning touchdown. Bill Corbus, All-American guard of the victors, added the extra point.

California's score was the result of a 25-yard placement kick by Arleigh Williams, left halfback, in the second quarter.

The fans had hardly settled in their seats after Stanford's score when California started a dramatic drive goalward. With power plays and a long pass, the Californians advanced to the Stanford four-yard line. Three plays were stopped. The Californians tried the aerial route. Stewart, Golden Bear quarterback, reached for the ball at the goal line but Bob Hamilton, Stanford halfback, cut in front of him. Hamilton snatched the oval and sped 60 yards downfield to end the scoring threat.

The victory earned Stanford a tie with Oregon in the coast conference standings, gave them their first win in three seasons over California and marked their first scoring on the same team over the same period.

Washington State preserved its home field tradition by defeating University of Washington, 17-6. Phil Sarboe, Washington State quarterback, led his team to victory in maintaining the team's record of never having lost a home game since Babe Hollingberry became coach several years ago.

St. Mary's of Moraga rolled up 22 points over U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles in the last-half finish which made the final score 22-14. George Wilson and Kellogg scored St. Mary's touchdowns on line plunges. A 74-yard pass play, Reel to Lott, and Murphy's 45-yard run after intercepting a pass gave the Bruins their scores.

Southern California, led by the great "Cotton" Warburton, scored a 19-0 victory over Notre Dame at South Bend.

On Sunday the Olympic club closed its season by unexpectedly defeating University of San Francisco, 13-9.

WILMINGTON AND WESTERN GAS TIE

Called at the end of the ninth inning on account of darkness, a Winter league baseball game between Santa Ana's Western Gas nine and Wilmington resulted in a 6-6 tie at Wilmington yesterday. It was the second tie of the season for the Santa Ana club, which broke even with Lomita, 8-8, in a game halted by darkness the preceding week.

Santa Ana earned a 4-0 lead in the fourth inning, pushed across two runs in the sixth. Wilmington scored in the fifth, sixth and seventh, and took advantage of two errors in the ninth to tie the score.

Lindsey, left fielder; Cook, short stop; and Farley, third baseman, gathered two hits each for the Santa Anans. Joe Koral, lanky second baseman, clouted a home run in the fourth inning.

SAINTS TAKE TO AIR TO WIN FINAL BATTLE

BY KENNETH ADAMS

Santa Ana's Saints high school football team took the bow as the curtain fell on the 1933 Coast League football season Saturday by coming from behind to launch a brilliant air attack against the Long Beach Poly high school eleven to win the last game of the season, 7 to 6, on Burcham Field, Long Beach.

The game distinctly was an upset, the Jackrabbit team having been favored to win, judging from past performances of the two high school teams.

While the game meant nothing as far as the league title was concerned, it proved one thing—that the Saints could play a good game of football, erratically.

The score was 6 to 6 with the Long Beach team on the heavy side of the scoreboard at the end of the half, but the determined Saints came back in the third quarter with an aerial attack that caught the Jackrabbits flat-footed and overhauled the beach eleven to score the winning touchdown and conversion.

Although Long Beach outgained the Santa Ana team with a yardage gain total of 127 to 101 yards from scrimmage, the forward wall of the Saint team held the reputed strong offensive attack at critical times.

Six points were scored by the Jackrabbits early in the first quarter after a poor kick by Stranske which went out of bounds on the Santa Ana 20-yard line. The Saint line held the Jackrabbit backfield for a gain of only one yard in two plays, after which John Carter, Long Beach passer, faded back and shot a 16-yard pass to Moore, who was downed on the Saint four-yard marker.

It took two plays for the Long Beach eleven to get to the three-yard line when Woodruff went over for a touchdown through tackle. Parker's attempted kick for conversion went wide.

After a deadlock most of the second quarter, Santa Ana unleashed an aerial attack in the third quarter which ended the game right there—although nobody knew it at the time. Undiscouraged after seven unsuccessful passes, the Saint passes started to click when one of Hendrie's several tosses connected for a gain of 31 yards, putting the ball on the Long Beach 29-yard line where the half ended the scoring threat.

Continuing the successful passing tactics in the third period, the Saints went right down the field for a touchdown. Taking the ball on their own 20-yard line, Santa Ana launched a touchdown drive good for 80 yards and a score. Newton converted to win the game for the Saints. Six passes were thrown during the drive, the last pass thrown by Hendrie to Webb was good for 31 yards.

The Jackrabbits came back determinedly to threaten in the fourth quarter, but to no avail. The Long Beach team took the ball about 45 yards in two plays, but lost the ball. Santa Ana kicked out of danger and the game ended before the Long Beach eleven could get the ball back into scoring territory.

Out of 19 games in the Saint-Jackrabbit series, Santa Ana now has won eight games against six for its opponents. Five of the grid games have ended in ties.

In a curtain-raising event, the "B" team from the beach city did better than their heavier teammates to win from Santa Ana, 8 to 7. The Jackrabbit team scored late in the fourth period on a safety to win on Burcham Field.

The Sain team scored in the first quarter when Meserve crashed over the nine-yard stripe for a touchdown after a drive of 52 yards. Burns, Long Beach quarterback, went around left end and streaked 55 yards for a touchdown. The safety was scored when Brooks, Saint quarter, stepped out of the end zone when attempting to get away a punt from behind his own goal line, giving Long Beach the two winning points, for a safety.

CONDITIONS IN ISLANDS CITED IN CHURCH TALK

FULLERTON, Nov. 27.—The freedom of people of the islands under guardianship of United States as gained through education and Chistianity, brought to them through the people of the United States, was discussed last night by the Rev. E. Dow Hoffman, pastor of the Fullerton Methodist church, who told of his experiences while in the Philippine Islands.

"You can tell almost to the mile where the Gospel has been preached and where it has not been preacded; not by the better churches, but by the better homes, the better sanitation conditions, the attitude towards visitors," the Rev. Mr. Hoffman said.

"The Orientals are all hospitable, but the Oriental Christians are extra hospitable and those people are appreciative of the message that has been sent them through the generosity of God's people. The Gospel of Jesus Christ has worked miracles in those islands and in islands like that, and is bringing about a time when 'every tongue shall confess Jesus Christ as Lord'."

During his sermon, he drew word pictures of the conditions in the islands, of the comparison between the church of the islands and of the homeland, of the school, the home and the college.

JOHNSON NINE BEATS LEMON TEAM, 3 TO 2

FULLERTON, Nov. 27.—Pushing over a run in their half of the ninth, when Errol Stoner, husky Olive right hander, weakened momentarily, the Johnson Cake nine defeated J. Francis Lemon's Fullerton Merchants, 3 to 2, here yesterday.

The game itself was a pitchers' battle between Ralph Coughlin, Los Angeles, and Stoner. Both flingers were stingy with base knocks. Coughlin allowed Fullerton three blows—a homer, triple and a single, while Stoner granted four hits.

It was the Olive youngster who yielded under pressure, while Coughlin finished the last five innings by pitching hitless, scoreless ball.

Ward Sheldon started the scoring activities in the opening inning when he conected for a triple and then came home on Fritz Gunther's fly to left field. Otto Brandle added another tally in the fourth with a circuit.

Though Johnny Northum tripled in the fourth the Cake bakers failed to register until the eighth. The hard-hitting center fielder singled and was worked about the pads by his team mates. Whitmore, who walked, also scored in the eighth to tie the count, 2-all.

A pair of errors gave the visitors the winning run in the ninth, Stoner walking in Miller for the score.

The Merchants will play a benefit game for the unemployed Saturday it was announced by Manager Lemon.

FAMILY NAMES ON ENVELOPES OF COLLECTOR

FULLERTON, Nov. 27.—Charles Knowlton, stamp collector, has added to his collection of stamps and envelopes, 10 envelopes, the cancelled postmarks of which are the same as the names on the envelopes.

He tried the experiment using names of his family, and found that each has at least one city or town in United States bearing the names as he bears.

The latter, for instance, addressed to Orson Valentine Knowlton, the father of Charles Knowleton, was sent to Orson, Pa., and to Valentine, Neb., and Knowlton, Ky. The cancelled postmarks on the envelope across the top bears those names.

The letters were sent, in almost every instance, to towns in states where the individual had lived or traveled. Knowlton found in the experiment that there were eight towns named Auth, one named Cornelia, one Jane, one Charles and one, a nickname, Charlie, while the name Knowlton is given towns in three states.

The 30 cancelled post marks on 10 letters show the following names, and the envelopes bear the same names in typewritten addresses of the members of the family, without the states' name: Orson, Pa., Valentine, Neb., Knowlton, Ky.; Julia, W. Va., Charles, N. C., Spencer, Neb., Huntington, Ind., Knowlton, Ky.; Knowlton, Wis.; Avis, Pa., Sophia, W. "GYPSY" SMITH ENDS REVIVAL CAMPAIGN HERE

ANAHEIM, Nov. 27.—Bringing to a close a three weeks' campaign in the name of God, Gypsy Smith, evangelist, preached to full houses yesterday afternoon and evening and bringing several hundred more people to God as they signed the decision cards, that have been passed out at intervals during his three weeks' of services.

Having started the story of his life from the gypsy tent to the pulpit on Friday night the Gypsy concluded the history of his life yesterday afternoon and in the evening made his last appeal, basing his sermon on Act 16:25, and talking on "Stripe Washing."

His talk summed up thoughts from previous sermons in that he directed people to make a complete surrender to God and know the glory of a re-birth. God is able to do it, he told them, and I have witnessed it many thousands of times. I have never seen Him fail when men and women have made a surrender and obeyed God.

The Gypsy urged that his listeners confess their faults and begin again with a clear conscience. He cited several instances where men and women have confessed after many years and written checks for stolen goods and faced judges for crimes that were placed on the shoulders of innocent men. "They made their peace with God," he said and the penalty of jail is nothing compared to this.

"People don't believe in God but rather the church services, the forms and its functions. They go to church because they know that it is fashionable to do it, but if they really worshiped God they would fall on their faces before Him."

He then told the congregation that they vote blind men into places of power and then follow them. The only thing that will save America, he said, is to bring Jesus back to the pulpits and the only thing that will raise the wall is preaching Jesus.

"You do your stripe washing," the Gypsy directed, "and straighten out your mistakes of the past and you will find joy and humility in their place. You do your stripe washing and the people will believe in you. It glorifies God and honors Him and Jesus will clean you.

"Come a little closer to Jesus. Are you so close that you can come no closer? I am not. I can't get along without it. I must have Jesus."

In a last closing appeal he said, "My friends have I helped you in this last message or have I missed you? I have wanted to help you. Jesus has wanted me to help you."

The evangelist left Anaheim this morning for Los Angeles where he will stay until the end of the week after which he will open another campaign in Riverside.

TEAR GAS ONLY AROUSES FURY OF IRATE MOB

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP)—The first volley of tear gas bombs fired by the officers defending the Santa Clara county jail last night surprised and stunned the crowd.

Four state officers, on guard outside the jail doors, fired gas cartridges and dropped the bombs. The attack increased the fury of the mob.

Rocks, stones and grass clods rained down on the uniformed officers. Pipe fittings, pieces of concrete and short lengths of wood were also thrown.

When they had exhausted their gas supply, the officers sought refuge in a long tin shed. Deputies in the jail and courthouse tried to aid them by releasing more gas.

Officer Ben Torres, trapped outside, signalled for the deputies to leave some bombs on the windows. He braved the rocks to get them and toss them into the crowd.

The rock attack increased in volume. The air was filled with gas fumes. It was almost impossible to breathe.

Tears streamed down my eyes. My head was splitting. The mob was suffering the same treatment. I dashed through the volley to reach a telephone booth in the courthouse.

Just as I put in my call, I was blinded by tear gas. Deputy sheriffs, desperately striving to rout the mob, were dropping bombs from the upper floors of the jail into the courtyard.

Clouds of gas drifted into the booth and I was almost smothered. But I dared not move for fear of the barrage of stones outside.

It was an hour and ten minutes after the first gas bomb was thrown that the crowd made their opening attempt to storm the jail.

A group of 20 men tied wet handkerchiefs and rags around their faces. Screaming and shouting they dashed against the doors of the jail with a ten-foot length of pipe.

A shower of tear gas drove them back. They came on for a second attempt. Again the blinding, choking gas turned them back.

But on the third attempt they succeeded in breaking a hinge off the door. They were driven back. The lights in the courtyard went out. Cries of "lynch them" became more furious. The attackers pressed forward, disregarding the gas fumes.

I was still in the telephone booth. The air was hard to breathe and the screams of the crowd were horrible. But it was the steady thud of that pipe against the massive steel doors that was most maddening of all.

BIG PENGUINS ON S. A. STREETS TODAY

Four expert skaters, impersonating penguins, were in Santa Ana today with a musical sound truck to advertise the newly introduced "Thermalized Super Shell" gasoline being advertised by the Shell Oil company.

Penguins, symbol of the new gasoline, are impersonated by the skaters who glide along the streets to the music of "The Skaters Waltz" from the sound truck. Brief programs were given before each of the nine Shell stations and all independent stations, following the arrival of the truck at noon. Tomorrow, the truck and skater will be in Anaheim and other county cities.

The scene on the truck represents an Iceland igloo and mechanical penguins. M. A. Hauschild, Santa Ana manager for the Shell company, was in charge of the tour through downtown streets.

CHAUTEMPS FORMS FRENCH CABINET

PARIS, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Camille Chautemps today formed the fifth cabinet of the year, and decided to stake his life in the chamber of deputies this week on an appeal to all parties to pass the budget as a matter of national emergency.

It was practically identical with the moderate left wing cabinet of Albert Sarraut which was overthrown in the chamber on the budget issue Friday morning.

There was but one important change. Paul Marchandeau, of the Chautemps Radical Socialist party, was made budget minister in place of Abel Gardey, member of the left Democratic group which is the senate wing of the radical Socialists.

"SNEAK" PREVIEW SCREENED HERE

A surprise showing of one of the year's biggest pictures, "Flying Down to Rio," was enjoyed by a filled house at the Broadway theater last night. The showing was not announced in advance, being a "sneak" preview.

A number of well known studio executives, stars and others were present.

The picture stars Gene Raymond, Ginger Rogers and Delores Del Rio, but the work of a new star "steals' the show. He is Fred Astaire, singer and dancer, whose initial screen appearance forecasts big things for him in the cinema world. Many big scenes are included.

For the LOVE of EVE

by Lucy Walling

© 1933 BY NEA SERVICE, INC

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Eve Bayless, pretty assistant to Earle Barnes, advertising manager of Bixby's department store, marries Dick Rader, a construction superintendent temporarily working in Lake City. Dick wants Eve to give up working but she refuses.

Sam Holeridge, an advertising man employed by another store, becomes infatuated with Arlene Smith, stenographer at Bixby's, but she fancies herself in love with George Bliss. Handsome Theron Reece has been forcing unwelcome attentions on Eve.

Unknown to Dick, Eve has been playing the stock market on money borrowed from her mother. Mona Allen, copy writer, dislikes Eve and tries to make trouble for her. When an error, costing the store $2000, appears in an advertisement Mona is really responsible bu the blame falls on Eve.

Dorothy McElhinney, pretty school teacher who lives on the floor above Eve and Dick, joins them one evening on the porch. Eve thinks the other girl is trying to play up to Dick and becomes angry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIX

After that first evening when Miss McElhinney joined Eve and Dick on the porch she reappeared every time they sat out of doors.

"My name is Dorothy," she confided one evening, "but I wish you'd call me Dottie."

"Never!" Eve told herself savagely. "I suppose the next thing she'll want to call my husband by his given name. I like her nerve!" And sure enough, before long Miss McElhinney did assume that privilege.

But Eve found Miss Leeds, who shared the third front floor apartment with Miss McElhinney, most agreeable company. Miss Leeds seemed to have little time and devoted most of her evenings to work she had brought home from school or else to study.

"She's exactly the sort of person who should be instructing children," Eve told Dick. "She takes herself and her work seriously but at the same time she has a sense of humor. I like her."

For several years Dick had subscribed to a magazine devoted to pictures and stories of foreign lands. He offered to lend Miss Leeds his file of back copies and she was delighted.

"Always the bitter with the sweet, the thorn with the rose!" said Eve one night when she and Dick had folded their steamer chairs and gone upstairs to their rooms. "How happy we could be at the office if it were not for Mona Allen. And how happy our evenings at home would be if it were not for Dorothy McElhinney."

She was to remember that little speech a long, long time and to look back on those evenings that had been comparatively free from worry. Atlas Coupler, the stock Eve had bought, was being discussed generally now by those interested in the market and was highly recommended as an investment.

"I'm walking on air these days!" said Arlene. Eve felt similarly elated.

And then Atlas Coupler began to recede. The first day's slump of two points did not disturb Eve. Why, she thought, Pure Soap, Inc., had done that often in the short time she had had her holding. Even four days of decline did not frighten her because she had enormous faith in the issue. Charles, the office boy, had instructions from Eve to wait at the corner each day until the stock edition newspapers made their appearance and then to bring her a copy without delay. Arlene, tense and nervous, could scarcely wait until Eve handed the paper to her. Because of Mona Allen, the two girls had to assume a nonchalance they by no means felt.

Now Atlas Coupled was down 13 points and Eve wondered what would happen next. Each time it dropped Arlene figured her loss in terms of what she would have purchased had she not invested her money.

"There goes that Agnes hat I craved!" she said first. Then, "There goes that new three-quarter length lapin coat I counted on." Later, "My word, I lost my trip to Georgian Bay today." And finally, "Gracious, I've lost a year's supply of shoes! I'll have to come to the store dressed like a native of Borneo."

Eve was glad Arlene took her losses so good-naturedly. She felt responsible. Atlas Coupler would surely recover within a few days, she felt, and then her fears would prove themselves groundless.

But Atlas Coupler did not recover. Eve was in conference with Earle Barnes at 10 o'clock one morning the following week. The advertising manager's phone rang; with a frown of annoyance, he lifted the receiver and clipped a brief "yes?"

"It's for you," he said, handing the instrument to Eve.

"Sloan and Sanford Company speaking," boomed a stern, masculine voice. "Atlas Coupler has reached a new low and to all appearances is going lower. We must be in position to know that you will cover your interest or we shall be obliged to make other disposition of the stock."

Eve's face blanched to the lips. Barnes must have heard, because the voice over the wire carried so clearly.

"Why—why!" she stammered. "What do you advise me to do?"

"If we can rely on you to send your check for $200 within the next 24 hours we can keep you on our books. Otherwise we will have to sell your holdings, which will mean a total loss to you.

Eve thought rapidly. Barnes must not get an inkling of this situation.

"I'll be in this noon to cover my interest," she promised.

Barnes looked at her quizzically. No doubt he was curious about what had happened, Eve thought, but so long as she did her work satisfactorily she did not feel that she owed him any information concerning her personal affairs.

Immediately she tried to concentrate on Barnes' plan for a June campaign featuring sports goods. He was talking about improvising a log cabin on the third floor and having Mrs. Penney paint the scenery. "Heavens," thought Eve, "where will I get that $200 dollars?"

When the conference was over Eve departed, hoping she had missed no details of Barnes' plan. He sounded the buzzer for Arlene who passed Eve as she was leaving the office. The two girls exchanged stricken glances and Arlene raised her eyes upward.

Eve hurried to her desk telephone and called Dick's number. She had no reserve fund; her money was all invested in Atlas Coupler. She had even borrowed from her mother. There was no time to wire to Kate Bayless for more and, besides, telegrams frightened the family and were always followed by solicitous inquiries from kindly but curious neighbors.

"Dick," Eve begged, "can you come down town and meet me at the City Bank at noon? It's very important."

"I'll be waiting for you in the lobby," he answered briefly.

Dick must be busy, Eve thought. Perhaps there was some one with him or he would have said more. But she knew he would not fail her. Dear Dick! How had she managed to get along without him?

Arlene finally reappeared with her notebook and pencil. "I'll never be able to read these hieroglyphics," she said as she sat down at her typewriter to transcribe the notes. "Barnes is in a hurry for these letters and I'm as nervous as a cat! I'll see you later."

Eve gathered up several sheets of copy paper and a pencil and then went to the sports goods department to lay plans for the June campaign. When she returned Barnes was standing at Arlene's desk, taking up the letters as rapidly as she transcribed them. Poor Arlene! That act in itself was enough to make a stenographer nervous. It was just 12 o'clock. Eve hurried out of the building to keep her appointment with Dick. She would have to wait until later to talk to Arlene.

The front windows of Bixby's store were decorated with apple blossoms and there was a display of house and garden frocks, porch furniture and picnic equipment. But Eve felt none of the urge of the spring time. She hurried across the square, oblivious of all passers-by. In another minute she must face Dick and ask him to give her $200. Yet her plans were not formulated and she scarcely knew how to plunge into all the explanations that would be necessary.

She entered the revolving door of the bank. And then she saw him! Dick's face lighted with a glad smile but Eve's froze in horror. It was not because he was smoking his old briar pipe in a nonchalant manner. Here, in the midst of hurrying, well-groomed men and women, Dick had the temerity to be wearing his old slouch hat, baggy trousers and blue flannel shirt. And his coat had a streak of paint on one sleeve. What was more, he seemed entirely unconscious of his shocking appearance and was coming toward her.

"Dick!" Eve reproached him. "I didn't dream you'd come down in those old clothes!"

"Well," he said easily, "there was concrete to pour today so I didn't wear my tuxedo to work. Any how I didn't have time to go home to change."

CONDITIONS IN ISLANDS CITED IN CHURCH TALK

FULLERTON, Nov. 27.—The freedom of people of the islands under guardianship of United States as gained through education and Chistianity, brought to them through the people of the United States, was discussed last night by the Rev. E. Dow Hoffman, pastor of the Fullerton Methodist church, who told of his experiences while in the Philippine Islands.

"You can tell almost to the mile where the Gospel has been preached and where it has not been preacded; not by the better churches, but by the better homes, the better sanitation conditions, the attitude towards visitors," the Rev. Mr. Hoffman said.

"The Orientals are all hospitable, but the Oriental Christians are extra hospitable and those people are appreciative of the message that has been sent them through the generosity of God's people. The Gospel of Jesus Christ has worked miracles in those islands and in islands like that, and is bringing about a time when 'every tongue shall confess Jesus Christ as Lord'."

During his sermon, he drew word pictures of the conditions in the islands, of the comparison between the church of the islands and of the homeland, of the school, the home and the college.

JOHNSON NINE BEATS LEMON TEAM, 3 TO 2

FULLERTON, Nov. 27.—Pushing over a run in their half of the ninth, when Errol Stoner, husky Olive right hander, weakened momentarily, the Johnson Cake nine defeated J. Francis Lemon's Fullerton Merchants, 3 to 2, here yesterday.

The game itself was a pitchers' battle between Ralph Coughlin, Los Angeles, and Stoner. Both flingers were stingy with base knocks. Coughlin allowed Fullerton three blows—a homer, triple and a single, while Stoner granted four hits.

It was the Olive youngster who yielded under pressure, while Coughlin finished the last five innings by pitching hitless, scoreless ball.

Ward Sheldon started the scoring activities in the opening inning when he conected for a triple and then came home on Fritz Gunther's fly to left field. Otto Brandle added another tally in the fourth with a circuit.

Though Johnny Northum tripled in the fourth the Cake bakers failed to register until the eighth. The hard-hitting center fielder singled and was worked about the pads by his team mates. Whitmore, who walked, also scored in the eighth to tie the count, 2-all.

A pair of errors gave the visitors the winning run in the ninth, Stoner walking in Miller for the score.

The Merchants will play a benefit game for the unemployed Saturday it was announced by Manager Lemon.

FAMILY NAMES ON ENVELOPES OF COLLECTOR

FULLERTON, Nov. 27.—Charles Knowlton, stamp collector, has added to his collection of stamps and envelopes, 10 envelopes, the cancelled postmarks of which are the same as the names on the envelopes.

He tried the experiment using names of his family, and found that each has at least one city or town in United States bearing the names as he bears.

The latter, for instance, addressed to Orson Valentine Knowlton, the father of Charles Knowleton, was sent to Orson, Pa., and to Valentine, Neb., and Knowlton, Ky. The cancelled postmarks on the envelope across the top bears those names.

The letters were sent, in almost every instance, to towns in states where the individual had lived or traveled. Knowlton found in the experiment that there were eight towns named Auth, one named Cornelia, one Jane, one Charles and one, a nickname, Charlie, while the name Knowlton is given towns in three states.

The 30 cancelled post marks on 10 letters show the following names, and the envelopes bear the same names in typewritten addresses of the members of the family, without the states' name: Orson, Pa., Valentine, Neb., Knowlton, Ky.; Julia, W. Va., Charles, N. C., Spencer, Neb., Huntington, Ind., Knowlton, Ky.; Knowlton, Wis.; Avis, Pa., Sophia, W. "GYPSY" SMITH ENDS REVIVAL CAMPAIGN HERE

ANAHEIM, Nov. 27.—Bringing to a close a three weeks' campaign in the name of God, Gypsy Smith, evangelist, preached to full houses yesterday afternoon and evening and bringing several hundred more people to God as they signed the decision cards, that have been passed out at intervals during his three weeks' of services.

Having started the story of his life from the gypsy tent to the pulpit on Friday night the Gypsy concluded the history of his life yesterday afternoon and in the evening made his last appeal, basing his sermon on Act 16:25, and talking on "Stripe Washing."

His talk summed up thoughts from previous sermons in that he directed people to make a complete surrender to God and know the glory of a re-birth. God is able to do it, he told them, and I have witnessed it many thousands of times. I have never seen Him fail when men and women have made a surrender and obeyed God.

The Gypsy urged that his listeners confess their faults and begin again with a clear conscience. He cited several instances where men and women have confessed after many years and written checks for stolen goods and faced judges for crimes that were placed on the shoulders of innocent men. "They made their peace with God," he said and the penalty of jail is nothing compared to this.

"People don't believe in God but rather the church services, the forms and its functions. They go to church because they know that it is fashionable to do it, but if they really worshiped God they would fall on their faces before Him."

He then told the congregation that they vote blind men into places of power, and then follow them. The only thing that will save America, he said, is to bring Jesus back to the pulpits and the only thing that will raise the wall is preaching Jesus.

"You do your stripe washing," the Gypsy directed, "and straighten out your mistakes of the past and you will find joy and humility in their place. You do your stripe washing and the people will believe in you. It glorifies God and honors Him and Jesus will clean you.

"Come a little closer to Jesus. Are you so close that you can come no closer? I am not. I can't get along without it. I must have Jesus."

In a last closing appeal he said, "My friends have I helped you in this last message or have I missed you? I have wanted to help you. Jesus has wanted me to help you."

The evangelist left Anaheim this morning for Los Angeles where he will stay until the end of the week after which he will open another campaign in Riverside.

TEAR GAS ONLY AROUSES FURY OF IRATE MOB

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(UP)—The first volley of tear gas bombs fired by the officers defending the Santa Clara county jail last night surprised and stunned the crowd.

Four state officers, on guard outside the jail doors, fired gas cartridges and dropped the bombs. The attack increased the fury of the mob.

Rocks, stones and grass clods rained down on the uniformed officers. Pipe fittings, pieces of concrete and short lengths of wood were also thrown.

When they had exhausted their gas supply, the officers sought refuge in a long tin shed. Deputies in the jail and courthouse tried to aid them by releasing more gas.

Officer Ben Torres, trapped outside, signalled for the deputies to leave some bombs on the windows. He braved the rocks to get them and toss them into the crowd.

The rock attack increased in volume. The air was filled with gas fumes. It was almost impossible to breathe.

Tears streamed down my eyes. My head was splitting. The mob was suffering the same treatment. I dashed through the volley to reach a telephone booth in the courthouse.

Just as I put in my call, I was blinded by tear gas. Deputy sheriffs, desperately striving to rout the mob, were dropping bombs from the upper floors of the jail into the courtyard.

Clouds of gas drifted into the booth and I was almost smothered. But I dared not move for fear of the barrage of stones outside.

It was an hour and ten minutes after the first gas bomb was thrown that the crowd made their opening attempt to storm the jail.

A group of 20 men tied wet handkerchiefs and rags around their faces. Screaming and shouting they dashed against the doors of the jail with a ten-foot length of pipe.

A shower of tear gas drove them back. They came on for a second attempt. Again the blinding, choking gas turned them back.

But on the third attempt they succeeded in breaking a hinge off the door. They were driven back. The lights in the courtyard went out. Cries of "lynch them" became more furious. The attackers pressed forward, disregarding the gas fumes.

I was still in the telephone booth. The air was hard to breathe and the screams of the crowd were horrible. But it was the steady thud of that pipe against the massive steel doors that was most maddening of all.

BIG PENGUINS ON S. A. STREETS TODAY

Four expert skaters, impersonating penguins, were in Santa Ana today with a musical sound truck to advertise the newly introduced "Thermalized Super Shell" gasoline being advertised by the Shell Oil company.

Penguins, symbol of the new gasoline, are impersonated by the skaters who glide along the streets to the music of "The Skaters Waltz" from the sound truck. Brief programs were given before each of the nine Shell stations and all independent stations, following the arrival of the truck at noon. Tomorrow, the truck and skater will be in Anaheim and other county cities.

The scene on the truck represents an Iceland igloo and mechanical penguins. M. A. Hauschild, Santa Ana manager for the Shell company, was in charge of the tour through downtown streets.

CHAUTEMPS FORMS FRENCH CABINET

PARIS, Nov. 27.—(UP)—Camille Chautemps today formed the fifth cabinet of the year, and decided to stake his life in the chamber of deputies this week on an appeal to all parties to pass the budget as a matter of national emergency.

It was practically identical with the moderate left wing cabinet of Albert Sarraut which was overthrown in the chamber on the budget issue Friday morning.

There was but one important change. Paul Marchandeau, of the Chautemps Radical Socialist party, was made budget minister in place of Abel Gardey, member of the left Democratic group which is the senate wing of the radical Socialists.

"SNEAK" PREVIEW SCREENED HERE

A surprise showing of one of the year's biggest pictures, "Flying Down to Rio," was enjoyed by a filled house at the Broadway theater last night. The showing was not announced in advance, being a "sneak" preview.

A number of well known studio executives, stars and others were present.

The picture stars Gene Raymond, Ginger Rogers and Delores Del Rio, but the work of a new star "steals' the show. He is Fred Astaire, singer and dancer, whose initial screen appearance forecasts big things for him in the cinema world. Many big scenes are included.

For the LOVE of EVE

by Lucy Walling

© 1933 BY NEA SERVICE, INC

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Eve Bayless, pretty assistant to Earle Barnes, advertising manager of Bixby's department store, marries Dick Rader, a construction superintendent temporarily working in Lake City. Dick wants Eve to give up working but she refuses.

Sam Holeridge, an advertising man employed by another store, becomes infatuated with Arlene Smith, stenographer at Bixby's, but she fancies herself in love with George Bliss. Handsome Theron Reece has been forcing unwelcome attentions on Eve.

Unknown to Dick, Eve has been playing the stock market on money borrowed from her mother. Mona Allen, copy writer, dislikes Eve and tries to make trouble for her. When by error, costing the store $2000, appears in an advertisement Mona is really responsible bu the blame falls on Eve.

Dorothy McElhinney, pretty school teacher who lives on the floor above Eve and Dick, joins them one evening on the porch. Eve thinks the other girl is trying to play up to Dick and becomes angry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIX

After that first evening when Miss McElhinney joined Eve and Dick on the porch she reappeared every time they sat out of doors.

"My name is Dorothy," she confided one evening, "but I wish you'd call me Dottie."

"Never!" Eve told herself savagely. "I suppose the next thing she'll want to call my husband by his given name. I like her nerve!" And sure enough, before long Miss McElhinney did assume that privilege.

But Eve found Miss Leeds, who shared the third front floor apartment with Miss McElhinney, most agreeable company. Miss Leeds seemed to have little time and devoted most of her evenings to work she had brought home from school or else to study.

"She's exactly the sort of person who should be instructing children," Eve told Dick. "She takes herself and her work seriously but at the same time she has a sense of humor. I like her."

For several years Dick had subscribed to a magazine devoted to pictures and stories of foreign lands. He offered to lend Miss Leeds his file of back copies and she was delighted.

"Always the bitter with the sweet, the thorn with the rose!" said Eve one night when she and Dick had folded their steamer chairs and gone upstairs to their rooms. "How happy we could be at the office if it were not for Mona Allen. And how happy our evenings at home would be if it were not for Dorothy McElhinney."

She was to remember that little speech a long, long time and to look back on those evenings that had been comparatively free from worry. Atlas Coupler, the stock Eve had bought, was being discussed generally now by those interested in the market and was highly recommended as an investment.

"I'm walking on air these days!" said Arlene. Eve felt similarly elated.

And then Atlas Coupler began to recede. The first day's slump of two points did not disturb Eve. Why, she thought, Pure Soap, Inc., had done that often in the short time she had had her holding. Even four days of decline did not frighten her because she had enormous faith in the issue. Charles, the office boy, had instructions from Eve to wait at the corner each day until the stock edition newspapers made their appearance and then to bring her a copy without delay. Arlene, tense and nervous, could scarcely wait until Eve handed the paper to her. Because of Mona Allen, the two girls had to assume a nonchalance they by no means felt.

Now Atlas Coupled was down 13 points and Eve wondered what would happen next. Each time it dropped Arlene figured her loss in terms of what she would have purchased had she not invested her money.

"There goes that Agnes hat I craved!" she said first. Then, "There goes that new three-quarter length lapin coat I counted on." Later, "My word, I lost my trip to Georgian Bay today." And finally, "Gracious, I've lost a year's supply of shoes! I'll have to come to the store dressed like a native of Borneo."

Eve was glad Arlene took her losses so good-naturedly. She felt responsible. Atlas Coupler would surely recover within a few days, she felt, and then her fears would prove themselves groundless.

But Atlas Coupler did not recover. Eve was in conference with Earle Barnes at 10 o'clock one morning the following week. The advertising manager's phone rang; with a frown of annoyance, he lifted the receiver and clipped a brief "yes?"

"It's for you," he said, handing the instrument to Eve.

"Sloan and Sanford Company speaking," boomed a stern, masculine voice. "Atlas Coupler has reached a new low and to all appearances is going lower. We must be in position to know that you will cover your interest or we shall be obliged to make other disposition of the stock."

Eve's face blanched to the lips. Barnes must have heard, because the voice over the wire carried so clearly.

"Why—why!" she stammered. "What do you advise me to do?"

"If we can rely on you to send your check for $200 within the next 24 hours we can keep you on our books. Otherwise we will have to sell your holdings, which will mean a total loss to you.

Eve thought rapidly. Barnes must not get an inkling of this situation.

"I'll be in this noon to cover my interest," she promised.

Barnes looked at her quizzically. No doubt he was curious about what had happened, Eve thought, but so long as she did her work satisfactorily she did not feel that she owed him any information concerning her personal affairs.

Immediately she tried to concentrate on Barnes' plan for a June campaign featuring sports goods. He was talking about improvising a log cabin on the third floor and having Mrs. Penney paint the scenery. "Heavens," thought Eve, "where will I get that $200 dollars?"

When the conference was over Eve departed, hoping she had missed no details of Barnes' plan. He sounded the buzzer for Arlene who passed Eve as she was leaving the office. The two girls exchanged stricken glances and Arlene raised her eyes upward.

Eve hurried to her desk telephone and called Dick's number. She had no reserve fund; her money was all invested in Atlas Coupler. She had even borrowed from her mother. There was no time to wire to Kate Bayless for more and, besides, telegrams frightened the family and were always followed by solicitous inquiries from kindly but curious neighbors.

"Dick," Eve begged, "can you come down town and meet me at the City Bank at noon? It's very important."

"I'll be waiting for you in the lobby," he answered briefly.

Dick must be busy, Eve thought. Perhaps there was some one with him or he would have said more. But she knew he would not fail her. Dear Dick! How had she managed to get along without him?

Arlene finally reappeared with her notebook and pencil. "I'll never be able to read these hieroglyphics," she said as she sat down at her typewriter to transcribe the notes. "Barnes is in a hurry for these letters and I'm as nervous as a cat! I'll see you later."

Eve gathered up several sheets of copy paper and a pencil and then went to the sports goods department to lay plans for the June campaign. When she returned Barnes was standing at Arlene's desk, taking up the letters as rapidly as she transcribed them. Poor Arlene! That act in itself was enough to make a stenographer nervous. It was just 12 o'clock. Eve hurried out of the building to keep her appointment with Dick. She would have to wait until later to talk to Arlene.

The front windows of Bixby's store were decorated with apple blossoms and there was a display of house and garden frocks, porch furniture and picnic equipment. But Eve felt none of the urge of the spring time. She hurried across the square, oblivious of all passers-by. In another minute she must face Dick and ask him to give her $200. Yet her plans were not formulated and she scarcely knew how to plunge into all the explanations that would be necessary.

She entered the revolving door of the bank. And then she saw him! Dick's face lighted with a glad smile but Eve's froze in horror. It was not because he was smoking his old briar pipe in a nonchalant manner. Here, in the midst of hurrying, well-groomed men and women, Dick had the temerity to be wearing his old slouch hat, baggy trousers and blue flannel shirt. And his coat had a streak of paint on one sleeve. What was more, he seemed entirely unconscious of his shocking appearance and was coming toward her.

"Dick!" Eve reproached him. "I didn't dream you'd come down in those old clothes!"

"Well," he said easily, "there was concrete to pour today so I didn't wear my tuxedo to work. Any how I didn't have time to go home to change."

"SECURITIES" REV. H. OWINGS' SERMON TOPIC

"However we may differ as to the interpretation of Jesus' words when he said, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on the earth' we are prepared to admit that he was about right in his warnings about the dangers attendant upon the accumulation of wealth and the enduring value of spiritual investment," said the Rev. Harry Evan Owings in his morning sermon on "Securities."

"First he warns us to be wise enough to remember that earthly treasure is perishable. He referred to consumption by moth and rust. We find that a forest fire may wipe it out in a few hours, that our real estate is deprived of its value in an amazingly short time, and that our stocks and bonds, our 'securities' as we at one time called them, shrink in value sometimes even to the vanishing point. Spiritual securities never lose their value thus, especially if Browning is right when he says, 'There shall never be one lost good.'

Earthly Wealth Vanishes

Again, we can attest from our experience and observation the statement of Jesus that earthly wealth is subject to stealing by men. There is the petty thieving and the burglarizing of our homes. Or a notorious building and loan official can throw us into consternation by a wholesale embezzlement of our funds. We are caught even now by the outrageous tragedy perpetrated by fiendish men who slew a fine young man after kidnaping him in order to force some of his rich father's money from his hand to theirs. We read of endless trouble over wills due to the grasping spirit of people eager for money.

REASONS FOR THANKSGIVING OFFER SUBJECT FOR SERMON AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

"THANKSGIVING in 1933" was the theme discussed by Perry Frederick Schrock at the First Congregational Church yesterday morning. He stated that there were two kinds of reasons for gratitude, individual and general, personal and social. Each one is able to discover his own personal blessings but it is not always so easy to find the general and social reasons. "So let us think particularly about these general reasons for gratitude," said Mr. Schrock, "the reasons that we all have in common." Mr. Schrock said, in part:

"Let us be thankful for modern applied science; that which has made possible the modern machine age. It is now possible for production to meet the needs of all. The time is near at hand when men may learn how to live and not be under the necessity of spending all of their time in grinding toil to secure mere subsistence.

"It is true that the machine has caused 'technological unemployment.' That is our fault not that of the machine. We have not yet learned how to distribute that which the machine can produce. We will learn, however.

"Let us be thankful for the re-establishing of diplomatic relations with Russia. It means much for the peace and stability of the world. Jesus insisted upon right interpersonal relationships. That is why He said so much about forgiveness. Right international relationships are just as necessary. Recognizing the government of Russia does not mean that we want her type of government for ourselves. But it does mean that we recognize her right to have the kind of government she wants and that we propose to live with her in peace and friendliness.

"Let us be thankful for President Roosevelt. It is due to his courage that we resumed relations with Russia. That is an example of the courageous leadership he is giving us. He may make mistakes, but thank God he has the courage to try to do something. Thank God for his honesty and sincerity. I do not profess to understand the monetary problem. But when I see the crowd that is opposing President Roosevelt—the same crowd whose affairs are being investigated by the senate—I put my faith in the president. It takes courage to take a stand against these powerful interests. Thank God we have a man of courage in the White House.

"But the greatest reason for thanksgiving is found in the text of this sermon. Here it is: 'The things that are being shaken are obviously things that can be shaken. They are thus revealed to be man-made, passing and temporal things by the very fact that they are shaken, and they are being removed out of the way, so that the things which cannot be shaken remain. Therefore let us render thanks that we get an unshaken realm; and in this way let us worship God acceptably.'

"The words were written to second generation Christians who were suffering one of the Roman persecutions. Their world was shaking and some things were falling. The author of Hebrews is telling them that the things that can be shaken are shaken but the things which cannot be shaken will remain. And they were to render thanks for those unshakable things.

"Today, our world is being shaken. The business-industrial-political world is being shaken. The religious-church world is being shaken. It is well to be reminded that those things that are being shaken are obviously things which can be shaken. It is better to be reminded that there are unshakable things. The shakable is being removed to make way for the unshakable. Our high school buildings are an example. The earthquake shook them and because they are shakable they will be removed to make way for some unshakable buildings. In our social structure, in our religious life mourn not for those things that are being shaken but rather, let us render thanks that 'we get an unshakable realm.' In this way we shall be able to 'worship God acceptably' this Thanksgiving time."

Arrange Social For Brea Class

BREA, Nov. 27.—The Thanksgiving party of the Good Fellowship class of the Congregational church will be held in the social hall of the church tonight. A. O. Andrew is teacher of the class and with the president, A. A. Voorhees, will have charge of entertainment.

Every member of the class is asked to take some article of food to be placed in Thanksgiving baskets, which will be delivered by the class to families in Brea and vicinity.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS ARE SERMON THEME

Deep interest held the large audience that listened to Evangelist B. R. Spear last night at the Princess theater in his lecture, "Will Germany Fight?" A graphic picture was drawn of the present circumstances in Europe and especially of Germany. Mr. Spear quoted from Senator Borah, "I have said that there never would be peace in Europe, never disarmament, until the Versailles Treaty was rewritten."

The speaker asked why this statement was so? And answered it from a summary by David Lloyd George in which the Englishman said, "Those nations who insisted on stripping Germany of her weapons and leaving her defenseless pledged themselves to impose similar limitations on themselves. When the long-promised disarmament conference met, it dickered for months together, achieving no positive result beyond convincing Germany, with good reason, that most of her neighbors had not the slightest intention of redeeming the pledge they gave at Versailles by carrying out an honest measure of disarmament." Turning to the Bible, Mr. Spear gave the scripture on this singular condition. The lecture in brief follows:

God Outlines History

"Twenty-five hundred years ago God oulined the history of the world in a general way. Daniel gave to the king of Babylon this inspired outline. In 214 words (Daniel 2:39 to 43) He told of the rise and fall of the four great universal empires. Babylon, Medopersia, Greece and Rome. Following this Rome would be divided into 10 parts, and constitute the present nations of Europe in a general way.

"Then coming to the present European situation the prophet said that they would not cleave one to another. History of Europe testifies that this ancient prophet of God was inspired. Many wars have been fought with the hope of reuniting those broken fragments into another empire as in the days of the Caesars. Different rulers at different times have dreamed of it and the world war was another such attempt, but the simple words still hold good, 'they shall not cleave one to another.'

"Germany is one of the 10 parts in the prophecy as is France, and Italy. Think friends! Four universal empires on the stage of action in four centuries and then not another after that fourth falls and crumbles to the end of time.

"More than this the prophecy tells us that Germany and France will not cleave one to another. After 2000 years have passed, since the Roman empire came into power, we find these same nations of Europe still divided. How can the skeptic explain that?

Predicament of Christians

"Can you imagine the predicament of the Christian today, if, somewhere down the ages, after the fall of Rome, a world dominion like that of Rome had thrust itself athwart the stream of history? Suppose an Alexander of the Middle Ages had cemented all Europe into one mighty empire, subject to his sovereign will—what could I say? Troubled Europe is still explained by these words in Daniel, chapter 2, 'they shall not cleave one to another.'

"The prophecy does state that before there ever is a union of all Europe God will set up His everlasting kingdom. It says, 'In the days of these kings, (that is in the days of divided Europe) shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people . . . the great God hath made known what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain and the interpretation is sure.' Daniel believed it all when he saw it in vision, ought not Christians today believe it all when we see it in history? Study Daniel 2."

Topics for Week

Mr. Spear speaks on the subject tonight, "The Great Famine to Sweep the World. Will it be for Bread?" The subjects for the week are as follows, Tuesday, "Crooks, Thieves, Murderers, Will God Save Them?" Wednesday, "A Great Valley Filled with Human Bones. Hear the story of how they will move and talk." Thursday, Thanksgiving service, 'What Has America to be Thankful For? Will Present America Stay by the Principles of the Pilgrim Fathers?" Barrels are at the door to receive food and clothing for the needy Thanksgiving day. Bring what you have for them any night up to Thursday evening. Special music for the day.

The Friday night lecture is entitled, "Angels: Are They Fairies, Fancies, Fakes, Facts or the Spirits of our Departed Dead?" Meetings are held each night at 7:30 except Saturday. Good music each evening by a vested choir, led by C. W. E. Bond.

"SECURITIES" REV. H. OWINGS' SERMON TOPIC

"However we may differ as to the interpretation of Jesus' words when he said, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on the earth' we are prepared to admit that he was about right in his warnings about the dangers attendant upon the accumulation of wealth and the enduring value of spiritual investment," said the Rev. Harry Evan Owings in his morning sermon on "Securities."

"First he warns us to be wise enough to remember that earthly treasure is perishable. He referred to consumption by moth and rust. We find that a forest fire may wipe it out in a few hours, that our real estate is deprived of its value in an amazingly short time, and that our stocks and bonds, our 'securities' as we at one time called them, shrink in value sometimes even to the vanishing point. Spiritual securities never lose their value thus, especially if Browning is right when he says, 'There shall never be one lost good.'

Earthly Wealth Vanishes

Again, we can attest from our experience and observation the statement of Jesus that earthly wealth is subject to stealing by men. There is the petty thieving and the burglarizing of our homes. Or a notorious building and loan official can throw us into consternation by a wholesale embezzlement of our funds. We are caught even now by the outrageous tragedy perpetrated by fiendish men who slew a fine young man after kidnaping him in order to force some of his rich father's money from his hand to theirs. We read of endless trouble over wills due to the grasping spirit of people eager for money.

REASONS FOR THANKSGIVING OFFER SUBJECT FOR SERMON AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

"THANKSGIVING in 1933" was the theme discussed by Perry Frederick Schrock at the First Congregational Church yesterday morning. He stated that there were two kinds of reasons for gratitude, individual and general, personal and social. Each one is able to discover his own personal blessings but it is not always so easy to find the general and social reasons. "So let us think particularly about these general reasons for gratitude," said Mr. Schrock, "the reasons that we all have in common." Mr. Schrock said, in part:

"Let us be thankful for modern applied science; that which has made possible the modern machine age. It is now possible for production to meet the needs of all. The time is near at hand when men may learn how to live and not be under the necessity of spending all of their time in grinding toil to secure mere subsistence.

"It is true that the machine has caused 'technological unemployment.' That is our fault not that of the machine. We have not yet learned how to distribute that which the machine can produce. We will learn, however.

"Let us be thankful for the re-establishing of diplomatic relations with Russia. It means much for the peace and stability of the world. Jesus insisted upon right interpersonal relationships. That is why He said so much about forgiveness. Right international relationships are just as necessary. Recognizing the government of Russia does not mean that we want her type of government for ourselves. But it does mean that we recognize her right to have the kind of government she wants and that we propose to live with her in peace and friendliness.

"Let us be thankful for President Roosevelt. It is due to his courage that we resumed relations with Russia. That is an example of the courageous leadership he is giving us. He may make mistakes, but thank God he has the courage to try to do something. Thank God for his honesty and sincerity. I do not profess to understand the monetary problem. But when I see the crowd that is opposing President Roosevelt—the same crowd whose affairs are being investigated by the senate—I put my faith in the president. It takes courage to take a stand against these powerful interests. Thank God we have a man of courage in the White House.

"But the greatest reason for thanksgiving is found in the text of this sermon. Here it is: 'The things that are being shaken are obviously things that can be shaken. They are thus revealed to be man-made, passing and temporal things by the very fact that they are shaken, and they are being removed out of the way, so that the things which cannot be shaken remain. Therefore let us render thanks that we get an unshaken realm; and in this way let us worship God acceptably.'

"The words were written to second generation Christians who were suffering one of the Roman persecutions. Their world was shaking and some things were falling. The author of Hebrews is telling them that the things that can be shaken are shaken but the things which cannot be shaken will remain. And they were to render thanks for those unshakable things.

"Today, our world is being shaken. The business-industrial-political world is being shaken. The religious-church world is being shaken. It is well to be reminded that those things that are being shaken are obviously things which can be shaken. It is better to be reminded that there are unshakable things. The shakable is being removed to make way for the unshakable. Our high school buildings are an example. The earthquake shook them and because they are shakable they will be removed to make way for some unshakable buildings. In our social structure, in our religious life mourn not for those things that are being shaken but rather, let us render thanks that 'we get an unshakable realm.' In this way we shall be able to 'worship God acceptably' this Thanksgiving time."

Arrange Social For Brea Class

BREA, Nov. 27.—The Thanksgiving party of the Good Fellowship class of the Congregational church will be held in the social hall of the church tonight. A. O. Andrew is teacher of the class and with the president, A. A. Voorhees, will have charge of entertainment.

Every member of the class is asked to take some article of food to be placed in Thanksgiving baskets, which will be delivered by the class to families in Brea and vicinity.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS ARE SERMON THEME

Deep interest held the large audience that listened to Evangelist B. R. Spear last night at the Princess theater in his lecture, "Will Germany Fight?" A graphic picture was drawn of the present circumstances in Europe and especially of Germany. Mr. Spear quoted from Senator Borah, "I have said that there never would be peace in Europe, never disarmament, until the Versailles Treaty was rewritten."

The speaker asked why this statement was so? And answered it from a summary by David Lloyd George in which the Englishman said, "Those nations who insisted on stripping Germany of her weapons and leaving her defenseless pledged themselves to impose similar limitations on themselves. When the long-promised disarmament conference met, it dickered for months together, achieving no positive result beyond convincing Germany, with good reason, that most of her neighbors had not the slightest intention of redeeming the pledge they gave at Versailles by carrying out an honest measure of disarmament." Turning to the Bible, Mr. Spear gave the scripture on this singular condition. The lecture in brief follows:

God Outlines History

"Twenty-five hundred years ago God oulined the history of the world in a general way. Daniel gave to the king of Babylon this inspired outline. In 214 words (Daniel 2:39 to 43) He told of the rise and fall of the four great universal empires. Babylon, Medopersia, Greece and Rome. Following this Rome would be divided into 10 parts, and constitute the present nations of Europe in a general way.

"Then coming to the present European situation the prophet said that they would not cleave one to another. History of Europe testifies that this ancient prophet of God was inspired. Many wars have been fought with the hope of reuniting those broken fragments into another empire as in the days of the Caesars. Different rulers at different times have dreamed of it and the world war was another such attempt, but the simple words stfll hold good, 'they shall not cleave one to another.'

"Germany is one of the 10 parts in the prophecy as is France, and Italy. Think friends! Four universal empires on the stage of action in four centuries and then not another after that fourth falls and crumbles to the end of time.

"More than this the prophecy tells us that Germany and France will not cleave one to another. After 2000 years have passed, since the Roman empire came into power, we find these same nations of Europe still divided. How can the skeptic explain that?

Predicament of Christians

"Can you imagine the predicament of the Christian today, if, somewhere down the ages, after the fall of Rome, a world dominion like that of Rome had thrust itself athwart the stream of history? Suppose an Alexander of the Middle Ages had cemented all Europe into one mighty empire, subject to his sovereign will—what could I say? Troubled Europe is still explained by these words in Daniel, chapter 2, 'they shall not cleave one to another.'

"The prophecy does state that before there ever is a union of all Europe God will set up His everlasting kingdom. It says, 'In the days of these kings, (that is in the days of divided Europe) shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people . . . the great God hath made known what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain and the interpretation is sure.' Daniel believed it all when he saw it in vision, ought not Christians today believe it all when we see it in history? Study Daniel 2."

Topics for Week

Mr. Spear speaks on the subject tonight, "The Great Famine to Sweep the World. Will it be for Bread?" The subjects for the week are as follows, Tuesday, "Crooks, Thieves, Murderers, Will God Save Them?" Wednesday, "A Great Valley Filled with Human Bones. Hear the story of how they will move and talk." Thursday, Thanksgiving service, 'What Has America to be Thankful For? Will Present America Stay by the Principles of the Pilgrim Fathers?" Barrels are at the door to receive food and clothing for the needy Thanksgiving day. Bring what you have for them any night up to Thursday evening. Special music for the day.

The Friday night lecture is entitled, "Angels: Are They Fairies, Fancies, Fakes, Facts or the Spirits of our Departed Dead?" Meetings are held each night at 7:30 except Saturday. Good music each evening by a vested choir, led by C. W. E. Bond.

COMING PLAY CAST FILLED WITH JOHNS

The Johns have everything their own way in the cast of "Let Us Be Gay," famous Rachel Crothers comedy drama with which Santa Ana Community Players are to open their 1933-34 season on December 8 and 9.

However, readers are not to infer that any slang phrase was intended by the statement, for the Johns referred to, are not of the stage door variety. They are six-sevenths of the masculine cast of "Let Us Be Gay," all of whom bear the good old Anglo-Saxon name John, with only one man, Robert Horn, playing the role of "Whitman," to differ from the rule.

There is John Kenneth Colwell, who will play the principal role of "Bob Brown"; and there is John N. Miller, playing "Townley Towne." Perhaps it isn't generally known, but the initial J with which Wylie is prefaced by J. Wylie Carlyle, stands for John, as it does in the case of J. Leslie Steffensen. Carlyle will play the part of "Bruce Keen" in the drama, and Steffensen will enact "Wallace Grainger."

Then for good measure, the parts of "Struthers" and "Williams" have been given to two other Johns, John Hoy and John Knox.

Not content with centering their interest in one name for the majority of the men of the cast, the Players selected two Katherines for feminine roles. Katherine McDaniel will play the ingenue, "Dierdre Lessing," and Katherine Barr will play "Madge Livingston." The remaining three feminine Players show wider variety in nomenclature with Mona Summers Smith in the lead, "Kitty Brown"; Julia Ann Hyde as "Mrs. Boucicault," and Kristine Neilsen as "Perkins."

Originally scheduled for November 24 and 25, the opening play was postponed because of unavoidable changes in the cast. The first Friday and Saturday nights in December were considered unsuitable as so many patrons would be absent from the city for Thanksgiving holiday week end. So the later dates were chosen, and tickets sold for the November dates will be honored.

OPEN NEW MARKET

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 27.—Howard and Smith, owners of the Eleventh street market and pioneer grocers of this city, opened their new Main street Red and White grocery store and market, in their own building, Saturday. Several hundred people attended the formal opening and program.

POLICE MAKE LIQUOR RAID: NINE ARRESTED

With Santa Ana police making every arrest except one, nine persons were arrested over the week end for liquor violations with eight being booked at the county jail, including one for drunk driving and seven for drunkenness.

One of the biggest raids in many months was completed at 9:25 Saturday night when Mrs. Julia Sultzer, 40, colored, was arrested in her Cotton Club cafe, 1904 West Fifth street. Arresting officers found about three gallons of whiskey and 20 bottles of home brew beer in the cafe and about 1200 quart and pint bottles of beer in her residence at the rear, reports said.

A large number of patrons in the cafe were dispersed by the police but not arrested, although three men, William Glower, 39, Maple street, W. E. Grate, 55, 519 East Fourth street, and Jess Williams, 40, 1369 West Fourth street, were jailed for drunkenness shortly after the raid. Williams and Glover were released after each had posted a $25 bond. Williams, an electric welder, had been working all day on remodelling work in the jail and was officially booked only a few hours after quitting his job.

Mrs. Sultzer was released by officers after posting $300 bail on charges of possession and sale of liquor. The liquor was confiscated and brought to the police station as evidence. It was indicated today that she would be prosecuted only on the charge of selling liquor.

V. Skinner, 26, West Highland avenue, was arrested for drunk driving at 8:25 p. m. Saturday after his car collided with a machine driven by J. B. Mitchell, 526 West Third street, at Fourth and Broadway. No one was hurt and Skinner was released from the jail after posting a $250 bond. He told Officers Harry Pritchard and Clyde Flower that he had been drinking beer before the wreck.

Frank Townsley, 56, 632 North Birch street, was arrested at his home at 10 p. m. Saturday for drunkenness and was released Sunday after posting $25 bond.

H. J. Merrill, 25, 1322 North Sycamore street, was arrested for drunkenness on East Ninth street at 10:30 p. m. Saturday. He was released from jail yesterday after posting $15 bond.

Jesus Herrera, 35, Placentia, was booked by Officers Horace Lucy and Gus Barnes of Placentia at 1:45 a. m., Sunday.

Reported to be molesting women and children near Ross and Camille streets, Lloyd Velarde, 25, 1301 West Third street, was brought to the police station by citizens and jailed at 8:25 last night, by police for drunkenness.

CHURCH GROUP IN ARTY

SAN CLEMENTE, Nov. 27.—Dominoes and "500" were played at the benefit party given for members and friends of St. Clement's Episcopal church Friday evening in Guild hall. The party was one of a series being sponsored by the Woman's auxiliary of the church as a means of adding to the treasury.

Mrs. A. E. Adair, chairman, was assisted by Mrs. Charlotte LeMar, Miss Vee Sprague and A. E. Adair. Thirty were present. Sandwiches and coffee were served. Prizes for scores in dominoes were won by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hulbert. Winners in "500" were Mrs. F. W. Parsons and P. W. Smith.

The subjects are: Monday, Germany Fight?" A prophecy of the European troubles; Monday, "The Great Famine to Sweep the World; Will It Be For Bread?"; Tuesday, "Crooks, Thieves, Murderers, Will God Save Them?"; Wednesday, "A Great Valley Filled With Human Bones." HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 27.—Mrs. Archibald Edwards will be the speaker at the regular meeting of the Woman's club tomorrow afternoon at the clubhouse on Tenth street. Miss Sara Whitfield, club president, will give a report of the recent district convention. Mrs. Edwards is vice president of the Orange County Federation of Women's clubs and is a resident of Fullerton.

J. C. TO GIVE MUSICAL PLAY OF GAY 90'S

Reverting to the atmosphere of the "gay nineties," the music department of the Santa Ana Junior college under the direction of Miss Myrtle Martin, has under way a production to be given January 12 of "In the Shadows of the Rock" or "The Girl of the Golden Gulch," a melodrama of 1900.

Miss Martin said that they would not try to burlesque the play but would depend upon its unconscious humor to give the audience entertainment.

While the play was not originally musical in nature, several songs of the period such as "The Letter Edged in Black," "Father, Dear Father, Come Home With Me Now," and others have been incorporated into the production, Miss Martin said. She said that the cast will be costumed in the manner of the '90s, and will be presented either at the Willard auditorium or the Temple theater.

The cast of the play includes: Fred Briggs, Cleo Smith, Joe Wilson, John Henderson, Eugenius Jack, Milford Carmen, Cloy Francis, Milford Obarr, Catherine Rowlands, Louise Leck and May Delle Allen.

P.-T. A. To Hear Talk On Orient

GARDEN GROVE, Nov. 27.—At the regular meeting of the high school P.-T. A., in the Ashington grammar school, this evening, Miss Lula Minter of Santa Ana will speak on her trip through the Orient and show pictures.

Senior mothers, with Mrs. E. A. Wakeham as chairman, will be hostess at the 6:30 o'clock pot-luck dinner which will precede the meeting. Members of the committee will furnish the dessert, and other members are requested to bring either a salad or hot dish.

NEW MATERIALISM FLAYED BY PASTOR

Evangelist J. W. Bates yesterday spoke on the theme, "What Think Ye of the Christ?" at the Broadway and Walnut Church of Christ. He said in part:

"Probably the most evil influence of modernism is the new Materialism that has come into being—a cynical, negative and hopeless attitude toward life as a whole. It is the feeling that there is no purpose to life, that the universe is run by a mechanistic processes rather than by a governing spiritual power, that immortality is a myth and all religion a delusion.

'Recognition of this tendency no doubt prompted the late Mr. Coolidge to say, 'We do not need more national development; we need more spiritual development. We do not need more law; we need more religion. We do not need more of the things that are seen; we need more of the things that are unseen.'

"We need more knowledge of Christ. We cannot escape the question, 'What Think Ye of the Christ?" neither the fact that His truths alone point the way to happiness, usefulness, and integrity of character.

"That famous lawyer, J. H. Linton, in his book, 'A Lawyer and His Bible,' has said, 'I have hunted for 20 years and never found an infidel lawyer who has made a careful, lawyer-like brief of the claims of Christ to divinity.'

"The lawyer must either answer the argument or admit the conclusion. There His life stands—in prophecy, a silver thread of promise in the Old Testament fulfilled minutely in His life. At His death not one square inch of parchment contained a line He had ever written. He left no creed. His followers were scattered. He came from the manger and went to Joseph's new tomb, Merely a Man?"

DRUNK DRIVER HELD

HARBOR BONDS APPROVED BY J. C. METZGAR

J. C. Metzgar, well known local real estate broker and property owner, for the past decade actively identified with various community projects, today, in an interview with a Register representative, came out flatfootedly for the $1,194,941 harbor improvement project, towards the financing of which the county is asked to vote a $640,000 bond issue on December 19.

"Here is one bond issue that I am not only supporting but working for wholeheartedly," he said. "It is, in my opinion, Orange county's best development enterprise. It will not only boost the assessed valuation of taxable wealth, thus reducing gradually individual tax bills, but also furnish permanent employment for many of our citizens," he continued.

"Regardless of the apparent popularity of any bond issue, I like to reserve the right to thoroughly investigate the merits of any proposal and then work for what I believe to be beneficial to my home town and county. In the case of the harbor bond issue, I have gone into all phases of the project, and sincerely believe that the improvements as outlines in the plans approved by the United States engineers, will be of tremendous value to each and every property owner and taxpayer of Orange county."

HOME COMING AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Sunday evening the First Christian church brought to the congregation a Thanksgiving service under the title, "Home Coming Night."

The service centered around a church family, as illustrated in a three-act play titled "Mr. Bilings Wakes Up." The cast was: Mr. and Mrs. Billings played by Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Knights; Barbara Billings, Miss Agnes Brady; Tom Billings, Robert Haven; Dotty Billings, Betty Hanson; a Malay girl, Lucille Dunn; African boy, Norman Haskell; American Indian girl, Barbara Gerrard. Others who took part were Mrs. Edward Greene, president of the church choir; the choir of 35 voices, and Lester Rohrs, Edward Elsner, Kenneth Rohrs and Paul Elsner of the Christian Endeavor Male quartet.

An old-time reed organ was used to accompany the singers on the program.

Course For Teachers To End Tonight

The third and final session of the leaders' training institute at the Y. M. C. A. will be held at 7:15 o'clock tonight, according to announcement by Kenneth E. Morrison, chairman.

The evening will be devoted to a study of the recreational needs of boys and the weekday activities of organized Sunday school classes. The devotional service will be led by the Rev. W. J. Hatter, with R. Carson Smith presiding.

During the assembly period there will be addresses on the recreational life of the boy by Eric Twist, Judge Kenneth Morrison and Dr. George A. Warmer. The usual section conference for workers with boys of various ages will follow the assembly.

Chairman Morrison explained that interested men and women will be welcome even though they have not attended previous sessions. The attempt to help solve the problem of weekday recreation for classes may be found helpful by many teachers as programs and materials are discussed. The meeting is open to all who care to attend.

It is expected that steps will be taken to establish a definite course of training in certain lines of work for teachers of boys' classes, this action being taken in view of the great interest that has been shown by those attending the present short course, leaders said.

E. A. Watson Home Scene Of Party

TUSTIN, Nov. 27.—The beautiful E. A. Watson home at 124 Yorba Linda street was the setting for a delightful affair Friday night when Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Joseph L. Marshall, Mrs. Ruth C. Walker, Mrs. L. E. Allen and Mrs. Charles Griset entertained members of the cast of "Enter the Hero" and Miss May Rose Borum, director of the comedy.

An orange and yellow color theme was carried out in appointments for the party, which took place following the presentation of the play at the high school auditorium. A three-course chicken dinner was served at one long table, with dancing to radio music between courses and following the dinner.

Those sharing the hospitality of the co-hostesses were Miss Borum, Eunice Labrow, Helen Marshall, Dorothy Griset, Llewellyn Allen, Thora Francis, James Doyle, Bill Pepper, Donald Watson, Carl Hawkins, Robert Peacock, William Bachman and Eloise Walker.

COLLINS CALLS ARMY AND NAVY ACADEMY QUIZ

Congressman Sam L. Collins, whose district comprises Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino counties, today announced from his Santa Ana office that he has made arrangements for holding an open, competitive examination throughout his district on January 6, next, for the purpose of selecting applicants for appointment as principals or alternates to the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., and the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

The examinations, Collins explained, will be conducted by the United States Civil Service Commission, which body will also rate the examination papers. In holding a competitive examination, it was explained, an equal opportunity will be given each applicant to compete for one of the coveted appointments, and that selections will be based upon the ratings furnished him by the Civil Service Commission.

All boys desiring to take this examination should communicate with Congressman Collins at his Santa Ana office at the earliest possible date and not later than December 12, in order that the required number of test papers may be printed. Those selected for appointment as principals at the two academies will begin their studies next July, the announcement stated.

GRANT CLAIM TO SETTLE DAMAGES

Presiding Judge G. K. Scovel has granted the petition of Delores Gunther, 20, filed through her father and guardian ad litem, O. E. Gunther, former mayor of Orange, to settle a disputed claim for damages with Frederick Handy jr., and his parents, Fred K. Handy and Mrs. Helen C. Handy.

The disputed claim grew out of an automobile accident in which the Gunther girl received a concussion of the brain, friction burn on the forehead, lacerations of the lower jaw, abrasions of both elbows and knees and a slight injury to a blood vessel.

Through the court's ruling the Gunther girl's claim was compromised for $547.50 without the Handys assuming liability for the accident in which the girl was injured.

Young Handy is awaiting trial on charges of failure to stop and render aid after the crash which occurred near the Eddie Martin Airport.

NIMBLY and sure-footedly invading the highest and most inaccessible spots, the Rocky Mountain Sheep—"the Bighorn"—reveals qualities typically expressive of the traditional characteristics of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars.

It is the "Bighorn", admiringly called the "Monarch of the Trail", that now adorns the radiator of the New Dodge Six and Eight. Those familiar with the romance disclosed in a study of this Rocky Mountain Sheep will grasp the significance of the fact that he has been chosen to symbolize the dignity, fleetness, and rugged strength of the new Dodge Motor Cars.

According to scientific authorities, the Bighorn comes from an extended line of stalwart ancestors.

Many thousands of years ago there lived in the Himalaya Mountains a high-headed, noble, and upstanding animal—a sheep that found no rocky peak or cavern inaccessible. Due to his enterprising, and exploring nature he set forth into northward lands.

In the course of ages, he gradually invaded the mountain areas along the eastern coast of Asia. New environment developed new qualities and changes in the physical characteristics of these sheep. Some families stayed behind while others, more adventurous in nature, plodded on. They eventually crossed into Alaska, seeking new grazing grounds. Some ventured southward. Later on, generations found various families roaming the remotest sections of North America, from Western Alberta down through British Columbia and into Montana, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, Northern Mexico and the eastern shore of the Gulf of California.

The Bighorn as found in the United States is a staunch, nimble animal. He carries his head erect, and his huge horns sometimes grow to be seventeen inches in circumference and almost four feet in length. He faces the fiercest mountain snowstorms as well as the heat and arid atmosphere of desert "bad lands" with equal complacency. In years gone by he was an animal much prized by hunters and held in respect for his elusiveness. In fact, because of his popularity among hunters, game laws had to be enacted to protect him.

To Mr. A. E. Fairbanks, sculptor of the art department of the University of Michigan, should be extended the credit of this personification of Dodge dependability and performance. Deftly sculptured by Mr. Fairbanks' hands, the Bighorn literally dashes forth upon the radiator of the Dodge Six and Eight with swift and sagacious speed.

In this fine animal is found the perfect symbol of the sure-footed, agile dependability of the Dodge Six and Eight—of the characteristic Dodge ability to go and to keep going when all rivals falter — of the integrity and devotion to progress which continues to characterize the Dodge institution.

COMING PLAY CAST FILLED WITH JOHNS

The Johns have everything their own way in the cast of "Let Us Be Gay," famous Rachel Crothers comedy drama with which Santa Ana Community Players are to open their 1933-34 season on December 8 and 9.

However, readers are not to infer that any slang phrase was intended by the statement, for the Johns referred to, are not of the stage door variety. They are six-sevenths of the masculine cast of "Let Us Be Gay," all of whom bear the good old Anglo-Saxon name John, with only one man, Robert Horn, playing the role of "Whitman," to differ from the rule.

There is John Kenneth Colwell, who will play the principal role of "Bob Brown"; and there is John N. Miller, playing "Townley Towne." Perhaps it isn't generally known, but the initial J with which Wylie is prefaced by J. Wylie Carlyle, stands for John, as it does in the case of J. Leslie Steffensen. Carlyle will play the part of "Bruce Keen" in the drama, and Steffensen will enact "Wallace Grainger."

Then for good measure, the parts of "Struthers" and "Williams" have been given to two other Johns, John Hoy and John Knox.

Not content with centering their interest in one name for the majority of the men of the cast, the Players selected two Katherines for feminine roles. Katherine McDaniel will play the ingenue, "Dierdre Lessing," and Katherine Barr will play "Madge Livingston." The remaining three feminine Players show wider variety in nomenclature with Mona Summers Smith in the lead, "Kitty Brown"; Julia Ann Hyde as "Mrs. Boucicault," and Kristine Neilsen as "Perkins."

Originally scheduled for November 24 and 25, the opening play was postponed because of unavoidable changes in the cast. The first Friday and Saturday nights in December were considered unsuitable as so many patrons would be absent from the city for Thanksgiving holiday week end. So the later dates were chosen, and tickets sold for the November dates will be honored.

OPEN NEW MARKET

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 27.—Howard and Smith, owners of the Eleventh street market and pioneer grocers of this city, opened their new Main street Red and White grocery store and market, in their own building, Saturday. Several hundred people attended the formal opening and program.

POLICE MAKE LIQUOR RAID: NINE ARRESTED

With Santa Ana police making every arrest except one, nine persons were arrested over the week end for liquor violations with eight being booked at the county jail, including one for drunk driving and seven for drunkenness.

One of the biggest raids in many months was completed at 9:25 Saturday night when Mrs. Julia Sultzer, 40, colored, was arrested in her Cotton Club cafe, 1904 West Fifth street. Arresting officers found about three gallons of whiskey and 20 bottles of home brew beer in the cafe and about 1200 quart and pint bottles of beer in her residence at the rear, reports said.

A large number of patrons in the cafe were dispersed by the police but not arrested, although three men, William Glower, 39, Maple street, W. E. Grate, 55, 519 East Fourth street, and Jess Williams, 40, 1369 West Fourth street, were jailed for drunkenness shortly after the raid. Williams and Glover were released after each had posted a $25 bond. Williams, an electric welder, had been working all day on remodelling work in the jail and was officially booked only a few hours after quitting his job.

Mrs. Sultzer was released by officers after posting $300 bail on charges of possession and sale of liquor. The liquor was confiscated and brought to the police station as evidence. It was indicated today that she would be prosecuted only on the charge of selling liquor.

V. Skinner, 26, West Highland avenue, was arrested for drunk driving at 8:25 p. m. Saturday after his car collided with a machine driven by J. B. Mitchell, 520 West Third street, at Fourth and Broadway. No one was hurt and Skinner was released from the jail after posting a $250 bond. He told Officers Harry Pritchard and Clyde Flower that he had been drinking beer before the wreck.

Frank Townsley, 56, 632 North Birch street, was arrested at his home at 10 p. m. Saturday for drunkenness and was released Sunday after posting $25 bond.

H. J. Merrill, 25, 1322 North Sycamore street, was arrested for drunkenness on East Ninth street at 10:30 p. m. Saturday. He was released from jail yesterday after posting $15 bond.

Jesus Herrera, 35, Placentia, was booked by Officers Horace Lucy and Gus Barnes of Placentia at 1:45 a. m., Sunday.

Reported to be molesting women and children near Ross and Camille streets, Lloyd Velarde, 25, 1301 West Third street, was brought to the police station by citizens and jailed at 8:25 last night, by police for drunkenness.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 27.—Mrs. Archibald Edwards will be the speaker at the regular meeting of the Woman's club tomorrow afternoon at the clubhouse on Tenth street. Miss Sara Whitfield, club president, will give a report of the recent district convention. J. C. TO GIVE MUSICAL PLAY OF GAY 90'S

Reverting to the atmosphere of the "gay nineties," the music department of the Santa Ana Junior college under the direction of Miss Myrtle Martin, has under way a production to be given January 12 of "In the Shadows of the Rock" or "The Girl of the Golden Gulch," a melodrama of 1900.

Miss Martin said that they would not try to burlesque the play but would depend upon its unconscious humor to give the audience entertainment.

While the play was not originally musical in nature, several songs of the period such as "The Letter Edged in Black," "Father, Dear Father, Come Home With Me Now," and others have been incorporated into the production, Miss Martin said. She said that the cast will be costumed in the manner of the '90s, and will be presented either at the Willard auditorium or the Temple theater.

The cast of the play includes: Fred Briggs, Cleo Smith, Joe Wilson, John Henderson, Eugenius Jack, Milford Carmen, Cloy Francis, Milford Obarr, Catherine Rowlands, Louise Leck and May Delle Allen.

P.-T. A. To Hear Talk On Orient

GARDEN GROVE, Nov. 27.—At the regular meeting of the high school P.-T. A., in the Ashington grammar school, this evening, Miss Lula Minter of Santa Ana will speak on her trip through the Orient and show pictures.

Senior mothers, with Mrs. E. A. Wakeham as chairman, will be hostess at the 6:30 o'clock pot-luck dinner which will precede the meeting. Members of the committee will furnish the dessert, and other members are requested to bring either a salad or hot dish.

NEW MATERIALISM FLAYED BY PASTOR

Evangelist J. W. Bates yesterday spoke on the theme, "What Think Ye of the Christ?" at the Broadway and Walnut Church of Christ. He said in part:

"Probably the most evil influence of modernism is the new Materialism that has come into being—a cynical, negative and hopeless attitude toward life as a whole. It is the feeling that there is no purpose to life, that the universe is run by mechanistic processes rather than by a governing spiritual power, that immortality is a myth and all religion a delusion.

'Recognition of this tendency no doubt prompted the late Mr. Coolidge to say, 'We do not need more national development; we need more spiritual development. We do not need more law; we need more religion. We do not need more of the things that are seen; we need more of the things that are unseen.'

"We need more knowledge of Christ. We cannot escape the question, 'What Think Ye of the Christ?" neither the fact that His truths alone point the way to happiness, usefulness, and integrity of character.

"That famous lawyer, J. H. Linton, in his book, 'A Lawyer and His Bible,' has said, 'I have hunted for 20 years and never found an infidel lawyer who has made a careful, lawyer-like brief of the claims of Christ to divinity.'

"The lawyer must either answer the argument or admit the conclusion. There His life stands—in prophecy, a silver thread of promise in the Old Testament fulfilled minutely in His life. At His death not one square inch of parchment contained a line He had ever written. He left no creed. His followers were scattered. He came from the manger and went to Joseph's new tomb, Merely a Man?"

DRUNK DRIVER HELD

HARBOR BONDS APPROVED BY J. C. METZGAR

J. C. Metzgar, well known local real estate broker and property owner, for the past decade actively identified with various community projects, today, in an interview with a Register representative, came out flatfootedly for the $1,194,941 harbor improvement project, towards the financing of which the county is asked to vote a $640,000 bond issue on December 19.

"Here is one bond issue that I am not only supporting but working for wholeheartedly," he said. "It is, in my opinion, Orange county's best development enterprise. It will not only boost the assessed valuation of taxable wealth, thus reducing gradually individual tax bills, but also furnish permanent employment for many of our citizens," he continued.

"Regardless of the apparent popularity of any bond issue, I like to reserve the right to thoroughly investigate the merits of any proposal and then work for what I believe to be beneficial to my home town and county. In the case of the harbor bond issue, I have gone into all phases of the project, and sincerely believe that the improvements as outlines in the plans approved by the United States engineers, will be of tremendous value to each and every property owner and taxpayer of Orange county."

HOME COMING AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Sunday evening the First Christian church brought to the congregation a Thanksgiving service under the title, "Home Coming Night."

The service centered around a church family, as illustrated in a three-act play titled "Mr. Billings Wakes Up." The cast was: Mr. and Mrs. Billings played by Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Knights; Barbara Billings, Miss Agnes Brady; Tom Billings, Robert Haven; Dotty Billings, Betty Hanson; a Malay girl, Lucille Dunn; African boy, Norman Haskell; American Indian girl, Barbara Gerrard. Others who took part were Mrs. Edward Greene, president of the church choir; the choir of 35 voices, and Lester Rohrs, Edward Elsner, Kenneth Rohrs and Paul Elsner of the Christian Endeavor Male quartet.

An old-time reed organ was used to accompany the singers on the program.

Course For Teachers To End Tonight

The third and final session of the leaders' training institute at the Y. M. C. A. will be held at 7:15 o'clock tonight, according to announcement by Kenneth E. Morrison, chairman.

The evening will be devoted to a study of the recreational needs of boys and the weekday activities of organized Sunday school classes. The devotional service will be led by the Rev. W. J. Hatter, with R. Carson Smith presiding.

During the assembly period there will be addresses on the recreational life of the boy by Eric Twist, Judge Kenneth Morrison and Dr. George A. Warmer. The usual section conference for workers with boys of various ages will follow the assembly.

Chairman Morrison explained that interested men and women will be welcome even though they have not attended previous sessions. The attempt to help solve the problem of weekday recreation for classes may be found helpful by many teachers as programs and materials are discussed. The meeting is open to all who care to attend.

It is expected that steps will be taken to establish a definite course of training in certain lines of work for teachers of boys' classes, this action being taken in view of the great interest that has been shown by those attending the present short course, leaders said.

COLLINS CALLS ARMY AND NAVY ACADEMY QUIZ

Congressman Sam L. Collins, whose district comprises Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino counties, today announced from his Santa Ana office that he has made arrangements for holding an open, competitive examination throughout his district on January 6, next, for the purpose of selecting applicants for appointment as principals or alternates to the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., and the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

The examinations, Collins explained, will be conducted by the United States Civil Service Commission, which body will also rate the examination papers. In holding a competitive examination, it was explained, an equal opportunity will be given each applicant to compete for one of the coveted appointments, and that selections will be based upon the ratings furnished him by the Civil Service Commission.

All boys desiring to take this examination should communicate with Congressman Collins at his Santa Ana office at the earliest possible date and not later than December 12, in order that the required number of test papers may be printed. Those selected for appointment as principals at the two academies will begin their studies next July, the announcement stated.

GRANT CLAIM TO SETTLE DAMAGES

Presiding Judge G. K. Scovel has granted the petition of Delores Gunther, 20, filed through her father and guardian ad litem, O. E. Gunther, former mayor of Orange, to settle a disputed claim for damages with Frederick Handy jr., and his parents, Fred K. Handy and Mrs. Helen C. Handy.

The disputed claim grew out of an automobile accident in which the Gunther girl received a concussion of the brain, friction burn on the forehead, lacerations of the lower jaw, abrasions of both elbows and knees and a slight injury to a blood vessel.

Through the court's ruling the Gunther girl's claim was compromised for $547.50 without the Handys assuming liability for the accident in which the girl was injured.

Young Handy is awaiting trial on charges of failure to stop and render aid after the crash which occurred near the Eddie Martin Airport.

Early Morning Wedding Rites Conducted in Trinity Church

Employing the solemn beauty of the Episcopal marriage service, the Rev. J. A. Shirley, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, Orange, yesterday morning at 8 o'clock united in marriage Miss Veneta Viau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph U. Viau, 325 South Orange street, Orange, and Thomas E. Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Davis, Couer d'Alene, Idaho.

Relatives and close family friends assembling in Trinity church, found its quiet dignity enhanced by the great baskets of cotoneaster sprays gracing the chancel, with smaller sprays entwined about the candles marking entrance to the pews.

Miss Dorothy Proctor at the organ, played such appropriate selections as "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly" in addition to the traditional wedding marches, and the muted notes of "Indian Love Call" during the reading of the service.

Miss Viau, entering the church on the arm of her father by whom she was given in marriage, was very lovely in her formal gown of crepe with touches of lace and satin in its trimming. Her veil was that first worn by her cousin, Mrs. Thomas Tournat of this city, and again by her sister, Mrs. William Fritcher, when they were brides. The exquisite lace which formed a part of the veil, was Miss Luvicy Carter's, brought from Brussels. Combining "something, old, borrowed and blue," was the pearl and turquoise necklace of her aunt, Miss Ora Cartmell, while other touches of blue were seen in her dainty slippers and the pale blue delphiniums mingled with the gardenias of the bridal bouquet.

Mrs. William Fritcher served her sister as honor matron, wearing larkspur blue crepe, with a tiny flaring hat of black and silver, and carrying a silver-tied cluster of sweet peas dominantly pink to harmonize with the velvet ribbons of her frock.

Mr. Davis, waiting at the altar with the rector, was attended by William Fritcher, while completing the attendants were George and Ernest Viau, brother and cousin of the bride.

Leaving the altar to the strains of Mendelssohn, the new Mr. and Mrs. Davis paused in the foyer with their attendants, to receive felicitations of the wedding guests. Later they were complimented at a breakfast in the Viau home, where decorative appointments were all in white with white candles. Swaying above the bride's table was a large wedding bell with a shower of silver musical notes, which continued to the table where they served as place cards.

Although Mr. and Mrs. Davis plan to spend part of their honeymoon in this vicinity since they want to be home for the family celebration of Thanksgiving, they will leave at an early date for an automobile trip through the Southland, continuing to the Imperial valley where they will make their home.

Description of Naples Given for Travel Section

Presenting a vivid world picture of "Naples and Her Environs," Miss Preble Drake provided a delightful program for the meeting of Ebell Third Travel section held the past week in the clubhouse.

The speaker told of the unbounded enthusiasm which the Italians have for Naples, a city to which nature has given a setting unparalleled by other cities of the world. She spoke of its many edifices of historical and architectural interest, and of its celebrated national museum.

Miss Drake stated that an idea as to the plan of an ancient Roman city is given the traveler by excavations made in the ancient cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum, which were destroyed by Vesuvius in A. D. 79. She told of the scenic beatuy of the environs of Naples, including the far-famed Blue Grotto.

Mrs. C. P. Boyer, leader, was in charge of the business interval. Mrs. G. W. Cantor was welcomed into the section as a new member. Guests of the afternoon were Mrs. Tradewell of Antigo, Wis., and Mesdames R. G. Carman and A. G. Green of this city.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Potato Soup

5 medium sized potatoes
2 quarts of beef broth
Celery salt to taste
Or the finely minced tops of 1 bunch of fresh celery
1 tbsp. flour
Salt and pepper to taste
2 raw egg yolks

Peel and slice the potatoes, cook them in half of the broth until they can be pressed through a sieve.

The better way to do this would be to cook the potatoes, strain off and save the broth, then mash and whip up the potatoes, returning them to the broth. The idea is to have a smooth puree, see! Have the unused half of the broth piping hot, mix the flour and butter smoothly and add to this hot broth, stirring until the broth has a slight body. Combine the potato puree and this broth, season to taste and set over hot water. Just before serving, beat up the egg yolks, stir quickly through the hot soup, and serve at once.

There are approximately 1200 calories in this soup, not particularly rich ones either.

If served as a dinner soup the recipe will take care of ten people ..a nice touch is to put a dab of whipped cream in the bottom of the cup, pour the hot soup over it and top with a dash of paprika.

If you want to serve it as the main dish—and it could easily be that—the recipe will serve six. With the soup serve split toasted rolls, hot and butter-y, a good salad, and a nice dessert.

Dessert? How about hot apple pie, right out of the oven, topped with whipped cream or served with cheese?

Miracle Tart

This tart is well named because its capacity to serve the required number of desserts is a near-miracle.

Take 1 pound of mince meat and half a dozen large apples. Line a shallow square tin with rich pastry, put mince meat in the bottom and arrange the apple in slices, standing on edge and close together, over the mince meat. Sift a cup of sugar over apple, a few bits of butter and lattice the top with pastry. Bake as usual. Makes eight or ten servings.

YOUNG THINGS WILL ADORE IT

PATTERN 1652

BY ANNE ADAMS

Gay, young, dashing, smart, exciting!—just a few of the adjectives that tumbled from our mouth when we saw this cape frock made up by our designer. It was of sheer wool, with the pert bengaline collar touched off by a few hand stitches—and she said it was the easiest thing in the world to cut and sew together. Now doesn't that sound very inviting to the younger set? There is an illustrated sewing Instructor with the pattern, too. Either cape or collar may be omitted as shown in the tiny views. Jersey, crepe or novelty cottons would also be appropriate to use.

Pattern 1652 is available in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 14 takes 2 3-8 yards 54 inch fabric and 3-8 yard 36 inch contrasting.

An invitation was sent Department Drill team No. 3 of San Diego to act as escort to Mrs. Winifred Ketchem of Bakersfield, department president on her official visit to Calumpit Auxiliary on December 19.

It was reported that 1300 veterans at Sawtelle and 850 United Spanish War veterans will receive Christmas gifts this year in the form of stationery and stamps. Members of the local auxiliary have been urged to care for their ow nveterans at home this year, and the department will care for the veterans at Sawtelle.

The past national president will be present at the next meeting, December 5) to be held in Knights of Columbus hall, where all future meetings of the organization will be held. There will be election of officers.

Past Presidents

With Mrs. Henry Helmer of Vista entertaining recently in the home of her sister, Mrs. H. S. Huff, North Center street, Orange, a delightful meeting of Calumpit Auxiliary Past Presidents was held.

Bridge was played during the afternoon, with Mrs. Elizabeth Moberly and Mrs. Katherine Reagan scoring first and second high. Each received a lovely boudoir pillow.

During the refreshment hour guests were seated at a long dining room table spread with lace doilies and appointed with gleaming crystal and silver. The soft glow of tapers added to the pretty scene. In honor of her birthday anniversary, Mrs. Reagan was presented with a decorated cake and other gifts.

Those present were two guests, Mrs. Jack Shaw and Mrs. Reagan, the hostess, Mrs. Helmer and her sister, Mrs. Huff, and Mesdames U. S. Glaze, A. Erickson, H. Moberly, Charles Dixon, Hardin Reed, Elva Hunt, Emma K. Wassum.

Early Morning Wedding Rites Conducted in Trinity Church

Employing the solemn beauty of the Episcopal marriage service, the Rev. J. A. Shirley, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, Orange, yesterday morning at 8 o'clock united in marriage Miss Veneta Viau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph U. Viau, 325 South Orange street, Orange, and Thomas E. Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Davis, Couer d'Alene, Idaho.

Relatives and close family friends assembling in Trinity church, found its quiet dignity enhanced by the great baskets of cotoneaster sprays gracing the chancel, with smaller sprays entwined about the candles marking entrance to the pews.

Miss Dorothy Proctor at the organ, played such appropriate selections as "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly" in addition to the traditional wedding marches, and the muted notes of "Indian Love Call" during the reading of the service.

Miss Viau, entering the church on the arm of her father by whom she was given in marriage, was very lovely in her formal gown of crepe with touches of lace and satin in its trimming. Her veil was that first worn by her cousin, Mrs. Thomas Tournat of this city, and again by her sister, Mrs. William Fritcher, when they were brides. The exquisite lace which formed a part of the veil, was Miss Luvicy Carter's, brought from Brussels. Combining "something, old, borrowed and blue," was the pearl and turquoise necklace of her aunt, Miss Ora Cartmell, while other touches of blue were seen in her dainty slippers and the pale blue delphiniums mingled with the gardenias of the bridal bouquet.

Mrs. William Fritcher served her sister as honor matron, wearing larkspur blue crepe, with a tiny flaring hat of black and silver, and carrying a silver-tied cluster of sweet peas dominantly pink to harmonize with the velvet ribbons of her frock.

Mr. Davis, waiting at the altar with the rector, was attended by William Fritcher, while completing the attendants were George and Ernest Viau, brother and cousin of the bride.

Leaving the altar to the strains of Mendelssohn, the new Mr. and Mrs. Davis paused in the foyer with their attendants, to receive felicitations of the wedding guests. Later they were complimented at a breakfast in the Viau home, where decorative appointments were all in white with white candles. Swaying above the bride's table was a large wedding bell with a shower of silver musical notes, which continued to the table where they served as place cards.

Although Mr. and Mrs. Davis plan to spend part of their honeymoon in this vicinity since they want to be home for the family celebration of Thanksgiving, they will leave at an early date for an automobile trip through the Southland, continuing to the Imperial valley where they will make their home.

Description of Naples Given for Travel Section

Presenting a vivid world picture of "Naples and Her Environs," Miss Preble Drake provided a delightful program for the meeting of Ebell Third Travel section held the past week in the clubhouse.

The speaker told of the unbounded enthusiasm which the Italians have for Naples, a city to which nature has given a setting unparalleled by other cities of the world. She spoke of its many edifices of historical and architectural interest, and of its celebrated national museum.

Miss Drake stated that an idea as to the plan of an ancient Roman city is given the traveler by excavations made in the ancient cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum, which were destroyed by Vesuvius in A. D. 79. She told of the scenic beatuy of the environs of Naples, including the far-famed Blue Grotto.

Mrs. C. P. Boyer, leader, was in charge of the business interval. Mrs. G. W. Cantor was welcomed into the section as a new member. Guests of the afternoon were Mrs. Tradewell of Antigo, Wis., and Mesdames R. G. Carman and A. G. Green of this city.

One of the merriest of the pre-Thanksgiving social affairs was that given Friday night by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Prentice in their home, 1660 East First street.

The autumn holiday dominated decorations of the home, in which chrysanthemums in deep rich shades were artistically mingled. Games and contests kept a continual flow of merriment, and winners in the different events were insured additional joy at Thanksgiving. Torosa Rebekahs

Wednesday night's meeting of Torosa Rebekah lodge, presided over by Miss Bessie Potter, noble grand, attracted a large attendance of members to I. O. O. F. hall, where the business meeting was followed by an interesting program under the direction of Mrs. Martha Van de Walker, vice grand.

Mrs. Ethel Brown, warden of the lodge, sang solos including "Silver Threads Among the Gold," followed by an interesting article. Concluding the program was a novel dance by a talented group from Orange, wearing appropriate costumes.

Repairing to the dining room, members and guests enjoyed pie and coffee served to the accompaniment of attractive decorations. Much of the talk centered around plans for the benefit card party at which the lodge will entertain on the night of December 13. This will be open to the public and will feature both bridge and 500 with prizes in each division and refreshments to conclude the evening.

TODAY'S RECIPE
Potato Soup

5 medium sized potatoes
2 quarts of beef broth
Celery salt to taste
Or the finely minced tops of 1 bunch of fresh celery
1 tbsp. flour
Salt and pepper to taste
2 raw egg yolks

Peel and slice the potatoes, cook them in half of the broth until they can be pressed through a sieve.

The better way to do this would be to cook the potatoes, strain off and save the broth, then mash and whip up the potatoes, returning them to the broth. The idea is to have a smooth puree, see! Have the unused half of the broth piping hot, mix the flour and butter smoothly and add to this hot broth, stirring until the broth has a slight body. Combine the potato puree and this broth, season to taste and set over hot water. Just before serving, beat up the egg yolks, stir quickly through the hot soup, and serve at once.

There are approximately 1200 calories in this soup, not particularly rich ones either.

If served as a dinner soup the recipe will take care of ten people ..a nice touch is to put a dab of whipped cream in the bottom of the cup, pour the hot soup over it and top with a dash of paprika.

If you want to serve it as the main dish—and it could easily be that—the recipe will serve six. With the soup serve split toasted rolls, hot and butter-y, a good salad, and a nice dessert.

Dessert? How about hot apple pie, right out of the oven, topped with whipped cream or served with cheese?

Miracle Tart

This tart is well named because its capacity to serve the required number of desserts is a near-miracle.

Take 1 pound of mince meat and half a dozen large apples. Line a shallow square tin with rich pastry, put mince meat in the bottom and arrange the apple in slices, standing on edge and close together, over the mince meat. Sift a cup of sugar over apple, a few bits of butter and lattice the top with pastry. Bake as usual. Makes eight or ten servings.

Now doesn't that sound very inviting to the younger set?* There is an illustrated sewing Instructor with the pattern, too. Either cape or collar may be omitted as shown in the tiny views. Jersey, crepe or novelty cottons would also be appropriate to use.

Pattern 1652 is available in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 14 takes 2 3-8 yards 54 inch fabric and 3-8 yard 36 inch contrasting.

something unforseen should arise by December 15 to jeopardize a new issue. One method would be for the government to pay off the maturing securities out of its fat $1,100,000,000 current cash surplus. Another would be the outright printing of new United States notes, or greenbacks, which were authorized to the extent of $3,000,000,000 in the Thomas amendment of the farm bill.

Inquiry at the bureau of printing and engraving revealed that no preparations were being made to carry out this provision. Only replacements for outstanding greenbacks were being printed, it was said.

It was learned on the highest authority that the federal reserve board was ready to resume government bond purchases if weakness should appear in the securities. The reserve banks more than a week ago abandoned buying the government bonds after officials believed that their acquisition of $600,000,000 of them had served the purpose of putting money in the hands of bond holders. The reserve board has billions for the purpose if needed.

Revelation of illegal opinions concerning the government's gold purchases shed new light on the recent resignation of Under-Secretary Dean Acheson, who ruled, in an opinion for the president, that RFC gold operations were of "doubtful legality." Stanley Reed, general counsel for the RFC, however, ruled otherwise, and was sustained by Attorney General Cummings, whose final word set off the gold buying, and led to Acheson's resignation, hitherto unexplained.

BRUCE TARVER IS KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

and boys' federation vice president.

Besides his parents, the accident victim is survived by one sister, Miss Anne Tarver and a brother, Ben Tarver jr., all of Santa Ana. The body is being shipped south and funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. from the Winbigler Funeral home. The Rev. W. J. Hatter of the Church of the Messiah will officiate. Interment will be in Fairhaven cemetery.

His father, federal referee in bankruptcy and well-known attorney here for many years, flew north to be at the bedside of his son.

Girl Is Killed

Miss Rhoda Patchett, 21, Newman, was killed about 9 o'clock last night on the state highway near Doheny park when her car, driven by her fiance, Alfred S. Mays, 26, also of Newman, swerved across the road to miss an approaching car and overturned several times. The girl was thrown clear of the car and over a fence into a deep cut on the Santa Fe railroad. She was dead before arriving at the Santa Ana Valley hospital, where passing motorists took her. Mays and James Easher, 18, Modesto.

Mays faces possible prosecution on manslaughter charges and is being held in the county jail. Easher was held as a material witness for the inquest, which was held at 2 p. m. today from the Smith and Tuthill funeral home by Coroner Earl Abbey.

Mays told California Highway Patrolmen Ben Craig and Lloyd Groover at the hospital that he swerved to the left to avoid an approaching car. After an examination, it was found that both men were intoxicated. Mays told officers that the trio had been to Tia Juana over the weekend and were returning to the north. Easher could offer no information about the wreck because he said he was asleep in the rear seat of the car and knew nothing until he was thrown from the car. He and Mays were slightly hurt.

Asked to Be Shot

Mays, broken up over the tragedy, entreated Officer Craig to shoot him while being taken to the jail or let him have a gun so he could shoot himself. When Craig refused, he asked to be allowed to run away and let Craig have an excuse to shoot him.

The death of Miss Patchett brings the total of traffic fatalities in the county this year to 50.

H. Noda, 45, Japanese of Orange, was instantly killed and an unidentified Japanese companion was seriously injured when his car crashed into a car driven by Harry D. Reed of Los Angeles at South Vermont avenue and Carson road yesterday. Reed, his mother and Mrs. Rebecca Urban, all of Los Angeles, are confined in the Torrance hospital in a critical condition.

Trig J. Landreth, 33, Doheny park, narrowly escaped death and two other persons were hurt in a wreck at 8:30 o'clock last night on the coast highway one-fourth mile north of Dana point. E. R. Daffin, Doheny Palisades, was at the scene of the crash in a few moments and applied a tourniquet to the injured arm of Landreth and prevented him from bleeding to death. At the Laguna Beach hospital, where the injured man was taken, a physician said he would have expired except for the emergency treatment. He received a compound fracture of the elbow as well as cuts and bruises.

Cars Damaged

Landreth's car and a machine driven by H. A. Anderson, 30, 526 West Ivey street, San Diego, collided in the center of the highway and were badly damaged. Police reports indicated that both Landreth and Anderson had been drinking.

Mrs. Marion Anderson, 29, wife of the driver, and Mrs. Fred Hellesvig, 20, all of the same address, received cuts and bruises in the crash while O. A. Hellesvig, also a passenger, escaped injury. The women did not require medical attention at the hospital.

Mrs. Landreth told California Highway Patrolmen Walter Meyers and Dan Adams at the hospital that two turkeys were missing from the Landreth machine after the wreck.

No one was hurt in a peculiar wreck north of La Habra on the state highway Saturday. Mrs. Margaret Pollock, 30, 704 East Beverly avenue, Whittier, said that the throttle on her car became stuck and caused her car to run away and overturn.

Bank In Control

Aldrich's interruption was to emphasize that the Chase National bank was in no way responsible for the dividend policies of Clarke's companies. Couzens' questions appeared to imply that the bank was in control of the companies when the dividend was paid.

"Then you were paying dividends at a time—," Couzens was saying to Place when Aldrich came to the committee table.

"I think that is an implication that Mr. Place knew something about the dividend payment," Aldrich began. "Let me say—"

"I am not making any charges," Couzens shot back at him.

"Let me say—," Aldrich began again.

"Just a minute, Mr. Aldrich," said Couzens. "I am not making any charges. I am just making observations from the balance sheet of the company.

"I don't intend to have any interruptions from you when I am making this comment."

No Intimation

"There was an intimation that Fox Films was doing—" Aldrich began again.

"I want to point out to Mr. Aldrich," Couzens said, "that he is imposing his observations whenever he feels inclined to do so. I resent it."

"Mr. Aldrich has been reminded before," Couzens continued, "that this committee will conduct its own investigation and will not be dictated to."

"Well,—" Aldrich broken in.

"Just a minute," said Couzens, "I don't see that my statement called for any comment from Mr. Aldrich."

What Aldrich was trying to say was that the witness, Hermann Place, had no personal connection with the 1931 dividend.

Clarke, president of Fox Films at the time the dividend was paid, testified the motion picture business was "steadily declining" at the time but said it is improving now.

He admitted "the dividend should have been passed," but added "I didn't know it at the time."

SAN CLEMENTE

SAN CLEMENTE, Nov. 27.—Mrs. John Riley has left for Seattle to remain until after New Year's with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fitzgerald.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Smith, Mrs. James S. Gallagher, Mrs. John D. Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Smith are visiting in Calistoga as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gallaher, son and daughter-in-law of Mrs. James Gallaher.

up when a drunk guy in the gang yelled, "Amen, Brother Ben——"

We took the keys away from the deputies and broke into Thurmond's cell on the second floor. We missed seeing him the first two times that we looked. He was hiding up on top of the closet.

When we found him, one of the guys took him down and he fell, struck his head on the floor.

Thurmond never said a word from the time we seized him until he was dead. I think he was faking unconsciousness.

Two officers identified him for us. We dragged him to the park and tried to make him talk. I lifted his eyelids, and his eyes flickered, and he showed very plainly that he knew everything that was happening.

"Playing Dead"

He was just playing dead or something.

Part of the gang rushed Holmes' cell and he told us he was Pierce, but we had the goods on him.

There was a fellow in the party who knew him and a deputy sheriff also whispered: "Boys, you've got the right fellow."

He said afterwards his name was Johnson, but finally admitted he was Holmes.

The tear gas didn't seem to bother me very much.

The word got spread around that it was going to be a Santa Clara university student lynching. But I'm not a Santa Clara student. I didn't go to college. Probably some of the college boys joined us, but I think we got most of our recruits from speakeasies.

I knew Brooke Hart by sight, but never had spoken to him. I thought that his terrible murder should be avenged.

"The 'fleecing of the lambs' is a common expression used concerning the financial barons on the stock markets who prepared their schemes to deprive others of their store of wealth to fatten their own supply. Or we find it necessary to be on our guard always against clever schemers who, in one guise or another, plot to take from us our modest sums we have struggled hard to save. Heavenly securities, that is, loving, kindly deeds for the intellectual or moral or even physical welfare of our fellows are not subject to the same attempts to deprive and steal.

"But the third warning is perhaps the most serious. With the accumulation of material possessions, on large scale or on small, man is likely to set his heart and attention and loyalty upon that to the exclusion of the finer things. That wealth is likely to become an end in itself. 'Where your treasure is there will your heart be also.'

"In three ways material wealth may 'get' our hearts. It is likely to make us heartless and cold and selfish toward human beings. How often we see it strangle and choke men's fine sympathies and concern for other men. It is likely to make us careless and lax in our methods of accumulation. 'Get the money' becomes the slogan. 'Get it honestly if possible, but get the money in any event.' Or again it is likely to hold before us the goal of 'easy living'—'I have accumulated mine; let me live in the easy luxury of a good time for myself'—a blurred vision of his fellows results.

"Spiritual investments! There is the story of Raymond Robbins who despite his independent fortune decided upon a modest and simple mode of living along with the purpose to work for civic righteousness. After a hard campaign in a corrupt ward in Chicago he lay battered and bruised from the struggle in which the use of physical force was essential to securing justice in the voting.

SPARTA, Tex. (UP)—Jack Lawrence, Boy Scout executive, has new standing with the boys, whom he has trained to use bows and arrows. On an outing the boys encountered a rattlesnake. Lawrence put three arrows through it.

something unforseen should arise by December 15 to jeopardize a new issue. One method would be for the government to pay off the maturing securities out of its fat $1,100,000,000 current cash surplus. Another would be the outright printing of new United States notes, or greenbacks, which were authorized to the extent of $3,000,000,000 in the Thomas amendment of the farm bill.

Inquiry at the bureau of printing and engraving revealed that no preparations were being made to carry out this provision. Only replacements for outstanding greenbacks were being printed, it was said.

It was learned on the highest autohrity that the federal reserve board was ready to resume government bond purchases if weakness should appear in the securities. The reserve banks more than a week ago abandoned buying the government bonds after officials believed that their acquisition of $600,000,000 of them had served the purpose of putting money in the hands of bond holders. The reserve board has billions for the purpose if needed.

Revelation of ilegal opinions concerning the government's gold purchases shed new light on the recent resignation of Under-Secretary Dean Acheson, who ruled, in an opinion for the president, that RFC gold operations were of "doubtful legality." Stanley Reed, general counsel for the RFC, however, ruled otherwise, and was sustained by Attorney General Cummings, whose final word set off the gold buying, and led to Acheson's resignation, hitherto unexplained.

NEWSPAPER 64 YEARS OLD

BELLEVILLE, Kans. (UP)—The Belleville Telescope, a weekly newspaper, has been published for 64 consecutive years. The paper was established in September, 1870, and only has had three owners. A. Q. Miller jr., is the present editor.

IRVINE

IRVINE, Nov. 27.—Miss Leora Chambers, of Laguna Beach, was a recent guest of Betty Boosey.

Ransler Baker and George Veeh spent several days in Mexico with a party of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stone spent Sunday in San Bernardino visiting in the home of Mrs. Stone's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Weick.

and boys' federation vice president.

Besides his parents, the accident victim is survived by one sister, Miss Anne Tarver and a brother, Ben Tarver jr., all of Santa Ana. The body is being shipped south and funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. from the Winbigler Funeral home. The Rev. W. J. Hatter of the Church of the Messiah will officiate. Interment will be in Fairhaven cemetery.

His father, federal referee in bankruptcy and well-known attorney here for many years, flew north to be at the bedside of his son.

Girl Is Killed

Miss Rhoda Patchett, 21, Newman, was killed about 9 o'clock last night on the state highway near Doheny park when her car, driven by her fiance, Alfred S. Mays, 26, also of Newman, swerved across the road to miss an approaching car and overturned several times. The girl was thrown clear of the car and over a fence into a deep cut on the Santa Fe railroad. She was dead before arriving at the Santa Ana Valley hospital, where passing motorists took her. Mays and James Easher, 18, Modesto.

Mays faces possible prosecution on manslaughter charges and is being held in the county jail. Easher was held as a material witness for the inquest, which was held at 2 p. m. today from the Smith and Tuthill funeral home by Coroner Earl Abbey.

Mays told California Highway Patrolmen Ben Craig and Lloyd Groover at the hospital that he swerved to the left to avoid an approaching car. After an examination, it was found that both men were intoxicated. Mays told officers that the trio had been to Tia Juana over the weekend and were returning to the north. Easher could offer no information about the wreck because he said he was asleep in the rear seat of the car and knew nothing until he was thrown from the car. He and Mays were slightly hurt.

Asked to Be Shot

Mays, broken up over the tragedy, entreated Officer Craig to shoot him while being taken to the jail or let him have a gun so he could shoot himself. When Craig refused, he asked to be allowed to run away and let Craig have an excuse to shoot him.

The death of Miss Patchett brings the total of traffic fatalities in the county this year to 50.

H. Noda, 45, Japanese of Orange, was instantly killed and an unidentified Japanese companion was seriously injured when his car crashed into a car driven by Harry D. Reed of Los Angeles at South Vermont avenue and Carson road yesterday. Reed, his mother and Mrs. Rebecca Urban, all of Los Angeles, are confined in the Torrance hospital in a critical condition.

Trig J. Landreth, 33, Doheny park, narrowly escaped death and two other persons were hurt in a wreck at 8:30 o'clock last night on the coast highway one-fourth mile north of Dana point. E. R. Daffin, Doheny Palisades, was at the scene of the crash in a few moments and applied a tourniquet to the injured arm of Landreth and prevented him from bleeding to death. At the Laguna Beach hospital, where the injured man was taken, a physician said he would have expired except for the emergency treatment. He received a compound fracture of the elbow as well as cuts and bruises.

Cars Damaged

Landreth's car and a machine driven by H. A. Anderson, 30, 526 West Ivey street, San Diego, collided in the center of the highway and were badly damaged. Police reports indicated that both Landreth and Anderson had been drinking.

Mrs. Marion Anderson, 29, wife of the driver, and Mrs. Fred Hellesvig, 20, all of the same address, received cuts and bruises in the crash while O. A. Hellesvig, also a passenger, escaped injury. The women did not require medical attention at the hospital.

Mrs. Landreth told California Highway Patrolmen Walter Meyers and Dan Adams at the hospital that two turkeys were missing from the Landreth machine after the wreck.

No one was hurt in a peculiar wreck north of La Habra on the state highway Saturday. Mrs. Margaret Pollock, 30, 704 East Beverly avenue, Whittier, said that the throttle on her car became stuck and caused her car to run away and overturn.

MIDWAY CITY

MIDWAY CITY, Nov. 27.—Four local women, friends of Mrs. Ray Schureman, former local resident, were entertained at luncheon recently by Mrs. Schureman in her home at Pasadena. In the group were Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Charles A. Whittet, Mrs. Sidney Miller and Mrs. N. A. Nelson. The afternoon was spent in playing bridge.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tenney Wilson attended a D. A. R. luncheon in Santa Ana recently.

Bank In Control

Aldrich's interruption was to emphasize that the Chase National bank was in no way responsible for the dividend policies of Clarke's companies. Couzens' questions appeared to imply that the bank was in control of the companies when the dividend was paid.

"Then you were paying dividends at a time—," Couzens was saying to Place when Aldrich came to the committee table.

"I think that is an implication that Mr. Place knew something about the dividend payment," Aldrich began. "Let me say—"

"I am not making any charges," Couzens shot back at him.

"Let me say—," Aldrich began again.

"Just a minute, Mr. Aldrich," said Couzens. "I am not making any charges. I am just making observations from the balance sheet of the company.

"I don't intend to have any interruptions from you when I am making this comment."

No Intimation

"There was an intimation that Fox Films was doing—" Aldrich began again.

"I want to point out to Mr. Aldrich," Couzens said, "that he is imposing his observations whenever he feels inclined to do so. I resent it."

"Mr. Aldrich has been reminded before," Couzens continued, "that this committee will conduct its own investigation and will not be dictated to."

"Well,—" Aldrich broken in.

"Just a minute," said Couzens, "I don't see that my statement called for any comment from Mr. Aldrich."

What Aldrich was trying to say was that the witness, Hermann Place, had no personal connection with the 1931 dividend.

Clarke, president of Fox Films at the time the dividend was paid, testified the motion picture business was "steadily declining" at the time but said it is improving now.

He admitted "the dividend should have been passed," but added "I didn't know it at the time."

SAN CLEMENTE

SAN CLEMENTE, Nov. 27.—Mrs. John Riley has left for Seattle to remain until after New Year's with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fitzgerald.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Smith, Mrs. James S. Gallagher, Mrs. John D. Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Smith are visiting in Calistoga as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gallaher, son and daughter-in-law of Mrs. James Gallaher.

LEADER OF MOB RELATES STORY OF LYNCHINGS

up when a drunk guy in the gang yelled, "Amen, Brother Ben——"

We took the keys away from the deputies and broke into Thurmond's cell on the second floor. We missed seeing him the first two times that we looked. He was hiding up on top of the closet.

When we found him, one of the guys took him down and he fell, struck his head on the floor.

Thurmond never said a word from the time we seized him until he was dead. I think he was faking unconsciousness.

Two officers identified him for us. We dragged him to the park and tried to make him talk. I lifted his eyelids, and his eyes flickered, and he showed very plainly that he knew everything that was happening.

"Playing Dead"

He was just playing dead or something.

Part of the gang rushed Holmes' cell and he told us he was Pierce, but we had the goods on him.

There was a fellow in the party who knew him and a deputy sheriff also whispered: "Boys, you've got the right fellow."

He said afterwards his name was Johnson, but finally admitted he was Holmes.

The tear gas didn't seem to bother me very much.

The word got spread around that it was going to be a Santa Clara university student lynching. But I'm not a Santa Clara student. I didn't go to college. Probably some of the college boys joined us, but I think we got most of our recruits from speakeasies.

I knew Brooke Hart by sight, but never had spoken to him. I thought that his terrible murder should be avenged.

I found that several hundred others thought the same thing.

"SECURITIES" REV. H. OWINGS SERMON TOPIC

"The 'fleecing of the lambs' is a common expression used concerning the financial barons on the stock markets who prepared their schemes to deprive others of their store of wealth to fatten their own supply. Or we find it necessary to be on our guard always against clever schemers who, in one guise or another, plot to take from us our modest sums we have struggled hard to save. Heavenly securities, that is, loving, kindly deeds for the intellectual or moral or even physical welfare of our fellows are not subject to the same attempts to deprive and steal.

"But the third warning is perhaps the most serious. With the accumulation of material possessions, on large scale or on small, man is likely to set his heart and attention and loyalty upon that to the exclusion of the finer things. That wealth is likely to become an end in itself. 'Where your treasure is there will your heart be also.'

"In three ways material wealth may 'get' our hearts. It is likely to make us heartless and cold and selfish toward human beings. How often we see it strangle and choke men's fine sympathies and concern for other men. It is likely to make us careless and lax in our methods of accumulation. 'Get the money' becomes the slogan. 'Get it honestly if possible, but get the money in any event.' Or again it is likely to hold before us the goal of 'easy living'—'I have accumulated mine; let me live in the easy luxury of a good time for myself'—a blurred vision of his fellows results.

"Spiritual investments! There is the story of Raymond Robbins who despite his independent fortune decided upon a modest and simple mode of living along with the purpose to work for civic righteousness. After a hard campaign in a corrupt ward in Chicago he lay battered and bruised from the struggle in which the use of physical force was essential to securing justice in the voting.

SPARTA, Tex. (UP)—Jack Lawrence, Boy Scout executive, has new standing with the boys, whom he has trained to use bows and arrows. On an outing the boys encountered a rattlesnake. Lawrence put three arrows through it.

THE TINYMITES

The candles that the Tinies dipped were very large, and when one slipped from Duncy's hand, he shouted, 'Oh, I'm sorry as can be.

"I've spilled some blue paint all around. I hope that some way can be found to clean it up." The Star Man then said, 'Just leave that to me.

"There is no need to worry, son. The cleaning stunt soon can be done. Star Island is a cloud and I can blow the smear away."

His blowing quite surprised the crowd. Off went a portion of the cloud, and everything was clean again. The Tinies cried, 'Hurray!"

The Tinymites then worked until each monstrous candle had its fill of colored paint. Then Goldy shouted, "What do we do, now?

'There are no candle holders here, and we can't hold them up, I fear." The Star Man said, 'We'll set them in the cloud. I'll show you how.

"Out to the edge we'll take them all. Be careful, youngsters, do not fall. I want no broken candles. I'll be needing every one."

And then to Scouty he said, "You can place them. It's not hard to do. Just push them down into the cloud. You'll find that it is fun."

The candles, shortly, were all set. The Star Man cried, "A torch I'll get to set the candles blazing. That's the next thing we must do."

"Give me the torch," cried Coppy. 'Gee, I know you can depend on me. I'll light the candles, one by one, and I'll be careful, too!"

The fine old man agreed to this. Said he, "Be sure that you don't miss a single one. Then came a treat for all the Tinymites. When every candle blazed up high and spread bright colors 'cross the sky, the Star Man said, "Before you, lads, you see the Northern Lights." (Copyright, 1933, NEA Service, Inc.)

HAPPY LANDINGS
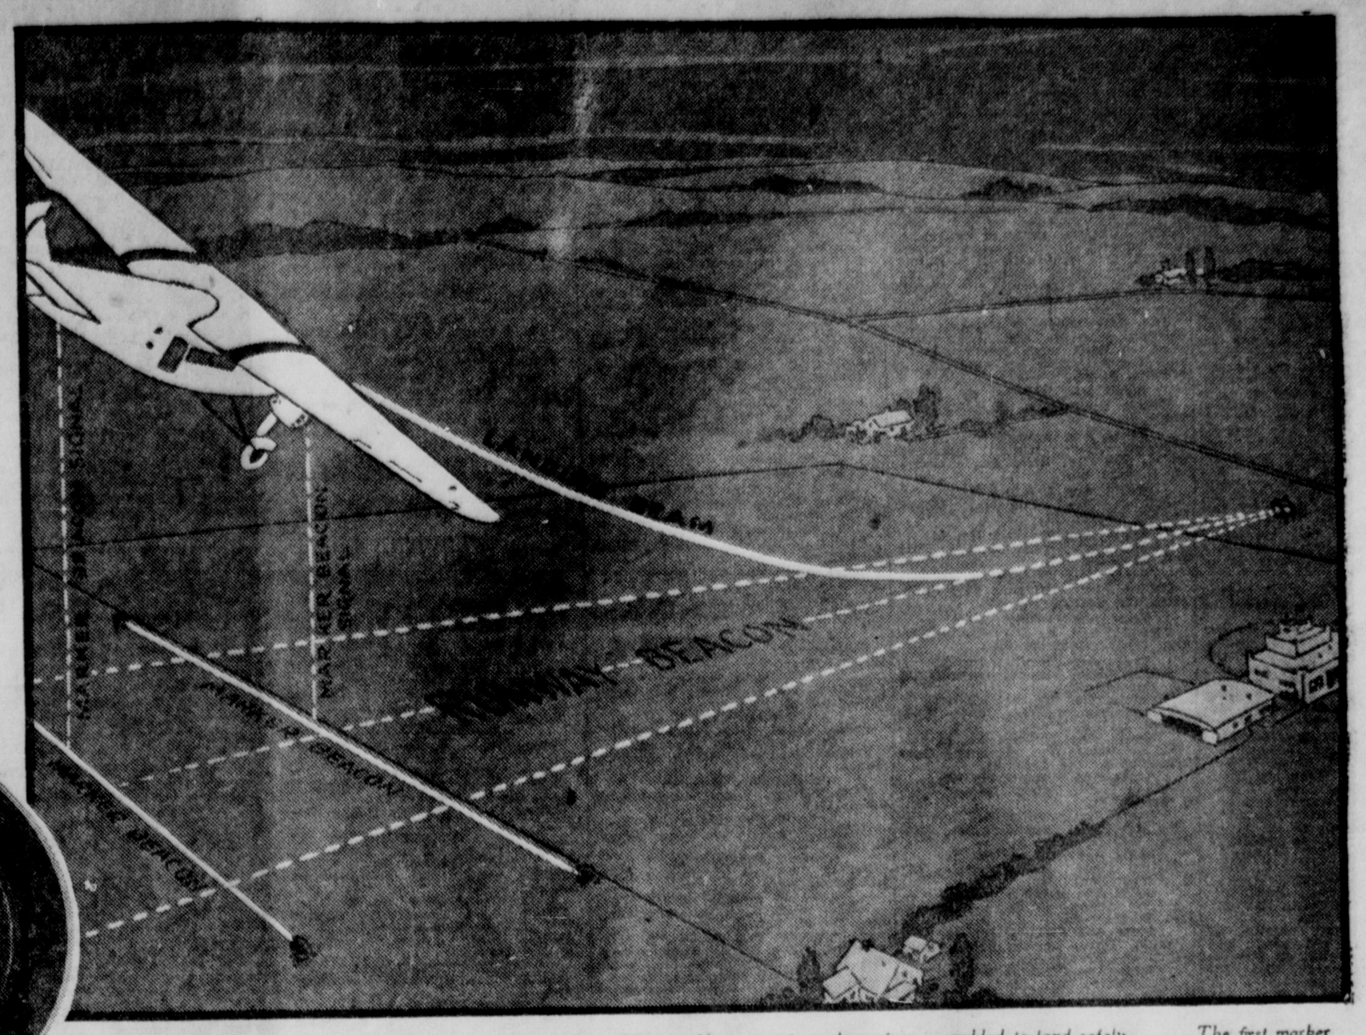
"BLIND-FLYING" PILOT



This shows how a pilot, flying blind to his airport in a dense fog, is enabled to land safely. . . . The first marker beacon warns him when he is some 2000 feet away from the field, and the second tells him when he has passed the field's boundary line. . . . The runway beacon, indicated by the dotted lines, keeps him on his course laterally, and by following the landing beam he brings his plane to the ground without danger.

These three photographs show how the two-pointer instrument helps the pilot make a blind landing. . . . At the upper left, the indicator shows the airplane over the runway and on the proper path; above, the airplane to the left of the runway and below the proper path; right, airplane to the right of the runway and above the proper path.

By J. H. Williams

TWO little pointers, kept crossed over one tiny spot on an airplane instrument board, make possible "happy landings" that are directed by radio when the unseeing pilot and plane are plowing through darkness and fog.

Radio and science have solved the problem of blind landings. Soon the mail will go through regardless of the weather, no matter how low the ceiling.

This latest development in radio aids to aeronautic navigation has completed the chain of devices that now make blind flying practical. With eyes flashing over this little dial and pointers, the pilot can swoop down out of fog and complete darkness with mathematical precision until the wheels of his airplane scrape the solid earth of the airport's runway.

Many of our present pilots can remember all too clearly the days when the only thing that helped a pilot fly from one primitive field to another was his own ingenuity and resourcefulness. Night flying was then a gamble with death.

With the advent of the air mail and the establishment of regular routes the airways began to be lighted. Powerful electric lights were set up at intervals along the way and the landing fields were equipped with flood lights. Night flying with perfect weather and visibility became possible.

But the weather man was not always kind enough and air traffic suffered from lack of regularity in schedules. This is where radio stepped into the aviation field for the first time.

ALONG with the lights, radio beacons were set up at intervals. Simple receiving sets in the airplanes picked up these signals that gave the pilot a point to point method of establishing his position. This allowed him to get through short distances of bad weather as long as he could still see his general landmarks and runways.

Scientists at the Bureau of Standards next concentrated on better methods of guiding the pilot so that the possibility of becoming lost would be very small. A radio device for direction finding was developed that allowed the pilot either to see or to hear his way along an approximately straight line between two airports.

Directional waves broadcast from airports are now picked up in modern airplanes on two vibrating reeds. When the vibrating lines are equal in length the airplane is on its course, a deviation from the true course increasing the deflection of one reed and decreasing the other. Distance indicators actuated by radio waves tell the pilot the distance to and from various stations.

Within the last year the Bureau of Standards has developed a new transmission-line antenna, called the TL antenna, which sends out highly accurate directional guiding radio waves. Waves from the older loop antennas were subject to a variable rotational effect, particularly at night, due to the action of the ionized layers of the upper atmosphere on the horizontal components of the broadcast wave. The TL system gets around this difficulty.

Thus the airways were clear for night flying as long as the runways at the airports were visible. Taking off in absolute darkness was a stunt that a pilot would do if necessary, but landing without seeing the ground was considered an impossibility.

Science at last conquers the aviator's biggest enemy, fog--- greatest single achievement in recent aviation history, says Colonel Lindbergh

MANY schemes were proposed that were based on the idea that a meter which would show the height of the plane with great accuracy would allow the pilot to sink slowly to a "pancake" landing after he had been guided to the edge of the field by the directional beacons.

The General Electric Company endeavored to put the familiar echo to work. This instrument shot a sound wave down to the ground from the plane and measured the time taken for it to be reflected back. This gave a measure of the altitude.

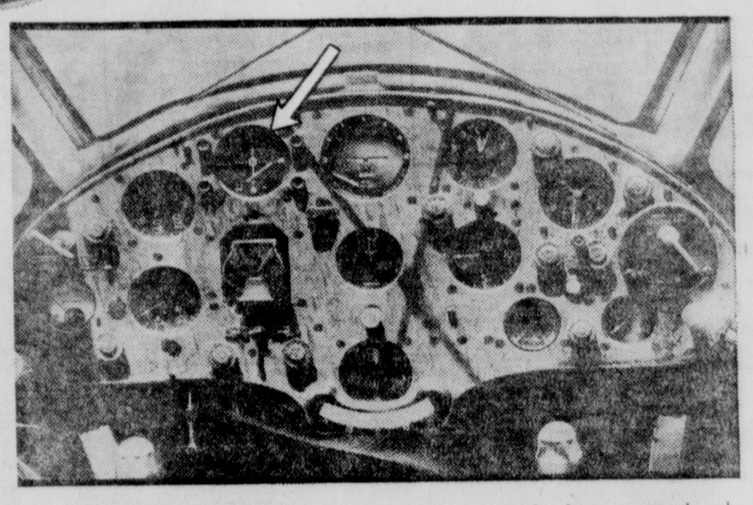
As the plane neared the ground the interval of time between the emission of the sound and the catching of the echo became shorter and shorter, until they combined suddenly into one short note. At that instant the pilot pulled back on the stick and pancaked to the ground.

But this scheme had obvious disadvantages, such as lack of directional guidance. Something had to come to be added to the range beacons, artificial horizons and other instruments that had made level and accurate directional flying possible under conditions of no visibility, such as are found in a dense fog.

An airplane with hooded cockpit, used for blind landings with the Bureau of Standards system of radio aids. . . . Standing by the plane are Col. Clarence M. Young, former assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics (right) and James L. Kinney, test pilot.

Ever since 1928 scientists from the Bureau of Standards have been working at College Park, Maryland, to solve this problem of finding a simple and effective radio system that would ensure fool-proof landings under conditions of no visibility.

The new radio apparatus developed by this group of scientists weighs only 15 pounds and was installed and tested at the Newark, N. J., Municipal Airport this year. The system depends upon three elements in order to inform the pilot of his position in three dimensions: height above the ground, direction to right and left, and distance from the runway. These elements are provided by the runway localizing beacon, marker beacons and the landing beams.



The arrow points to the two-pointer instrument on an airplane's instrument board. . . . The distance meter is at the extreme left.

THE runway localizing beacon informs the pilot of his directional position with respect to the airport and guides the plane over the runway.

The low power sending apparatus for this beacon, which is similar to the large inter-airport directional beacons, transmits two radio waves to the pilot from two small directional antennae. These radio waves carry two different sounds or frequencies spreading out from the transmitter like a figure 8.

In the top and bottom circles of the 8 a 65-cycle note is broadcast and in the quadrants not occupied by the circles an 87-cycle note is preponderant. There are thus four lines spreading out from the center of the figure along which the two different kinds of signals are equally strong.

An instrument on the pilot's instrument board shows him whether the plane is proceeding along a line of equal signal strength. The volume of the signal is automatically controlled so that the pilot does not have to tune or control the instrument in any way.

This directional indicator is the vertical pointer on the small dial that is the key instrument for all blind landing. The pilot simply guides his plane either to the left or right until this pointer stands straight up. Then he is directed along one of those four lines that stick out from the imaginary figure eight. That line is the line of the runway.

THE marker beacons tell the pilot how far he is away from the runway. A meter on the instrument board reads this directly up to distances as great as five miles. The needle of this instrument moves across a scale because the receiving set picks up more and more energy as the plane draws closer to the field.

As a final step in this distance indication scheme two signals are sent out to the pilot by two marker beacons. The pilot hears the first of these through his head-phones when he is 2000 feet from the edge of the airport and the second when he crosses the boundary. Thus the marker beacons tell him how far he has to go before landing.

The radio landing beam is the most important part of the scheme because it keeps the plane on a mathematical curve in a vertical plane which tapers to a perfect three-point landing on the runway.

The radio wave from the sending station located at the far end of the field spreads out from that point over a horizontal section shaped like a piece of pie. This high-frequency beam is tilted up from the earth's surface at an angle of 80 degrees.

The airplane receiving set picks up this energy and influences the horizontal needle of the master instrument. Airplanes do not fly directly down the beam, but follow a curved path underneath it.

This curvature of the plane's path diminishes as the plane approaches the ground so that the path of flight is the line along which the receiver picks up a constantly intense signal from the sending station. There is a balance between the loss of intensity in gliding below the beam and the increase in intensity in approaching the transmitter.

THE pilot does not have to tune his set or adjust the volume in any way. He simply keeps that horizontal needle pointing directly across the face of the master instrument and glides down to a perfect landing.

This system has been checked by more than a hundred landings where the pilot was completely blinded by a hood pulled over the top of the cockpit. The check pilot in the front cockpit would take control only in case of an emergency. At College Park the system has passed the acid test, for here the runway is only 2000 feet long and 100 feet wide.

The runway beacon adjustment was so perfect that, when five miles away, a lateral deviation of the airplane of only 200 feet from its course could be detected; and at 4000 feet, 20 feet was discernible. At College Park it is necessary to clear a chimney by only eight feet to make a proper landing. But a blinded pilot can do it and has done it more than 100 times.

A further test of the practicability of this method and of all the apparatus developed by the Bureau of Standards was a blind flight in a dense fog of a Department of Commerce airplane from College Park to Newark, a distance of 200 miles. James L. Kinney, the pilot, said that he did not see the field until several seconds after he had crossed the boundary.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, among other prominent pilots, has tested the apparatus by making two blind landings. He expressed his satisfaction with the new aids to aeronautic navigation and said that it was the greatest single achievement in recent aviation history.

With the research work being carried forward by the Bureau of Standards, engineers predict that airplane schedules will become increasingly regular and that bad weather will no longer be a reason for delay.

At present the blind landing apparatus is installed only at College Park and at Newark but engineers feel that it is only a matter of time before it will spread over the airways just as the earliest light beacons have done. Then the mail will go through regardless of weather.

A petition for the organization of a Harbor District to be known as Orange County Harbor District, and for the construction of the improvement and development work hereinafter generally described, was filed with the Board of Supervisors of Orange County, State of California, on November 14, 1933, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A. A SAD DAY IN CALIFORNIA

The public mind of California undoubtedly is on the lynching of the two kidnapers, who were taken from the jail by the mob at San Jose last night. On calm reflection, the people of the state will more and more come to the opinion that this lynching was only second in its seriousness to the kidnaping and murder itself.

Our country has been subjected, by racketeers and criminals of all kinds, to an orgy of indifference to and violations of the law, until respect for law has all but entirely broken down. Many people have lost, and many people are losing, faith in the efficacy of our whole court system. Lawyers practising criminal law use every dilatory device and every technicality of the law to protect the accused, and the courts, through precedents established, and sometimes by their own volition, seem to aid in the escape of the criminal from his just deserts.

Those who are demanding that justice be done and that society be protected, seem oftimes to be considered by the court and officials to be the ones guilty, because they are insisting on justice, and by courts and defendants of criminals alike, they are so humiliated and insulted frequently that they are discouraged in demanding the rights of society. And finally, when men are convicted and are serving sentence, or are about to be executed, the leniency of governors is the crowning act in the terrible tragedy of the breaking down of all respect for law.

In the light of these facts, with a horror of the crime in their mind, we can understand the feelings of the mob in their endeavor to break down the jail. The repudiation of the confession, beginning to lay the groundwork for possibly a long and maybe a successful defense, increased the anger of the people. And yet every intelligent member of that mob knew that of the whole blackened, dirty, moth-eaten fabric of disrespect for law they were helping make a disreputable part.

It may be that this action will impress upon people in the state the fact that folks consider such a terrible crime as this only with aroused indignation, and it may call a halt to some who might be considering such a crime. But is it not the saddest thing that the righteous indignation, which we hope was in the hearts of the members of the mob, cannot be carried over into the spirit of the enforcement of the law by our officials?

If the people of San Jose and California had been impressed, during these past days, by the activity of officials everywhere, that there was the deepest conviction in the minds of our peace officials that law should be upheld at all hazards, and that the guilty must and shall be punished, there would have been, to a degree, a consciousness that they could let the law and the officers take their course. But the mob knew their officers. They judged there was a flabbiness about their official backbone, and the action of the officers showed that the mob was right.

The sheriff had begged the governor for the state militia, but the Governor did not propose to protect the kidnapers by the army of the state. The sheriff had many deputies. They were well-armed. There is no question but that the sheriff could have brought the crowd to bay if they knew that he was determined to protect the jail by the guns if need be. But the mob seemed to know that there was no fear from that source.

According to the dispatches they were led by a 17-year-old boy with a crowbar. They were met with tear gas bombs. They entered the jail where the sheriff and the deputies had machine guns for the protection of the prisoners. If anyone doubts but that by a determined action the sheriff and his men could have prevented that mob from going further, in our judgment they do not know the nature of the mob.

But the very causes which aroused in the mob the thought that they probably would have to depend upon their own efforts to have justice meted out, were the same ones that caused the officials to fail in their hour of supreme test, The problem of the rape of the law by the kidnapers and murderers will never be solved by a mob of lynchers at a jail door. Our emotional nature may be stirred to executing such action. But civilization is not progressing along that route.

California has been injured. When the dispassionate judgement of the nation is upon this act, and upon the action of our officers and our Governor also, we are afraid that California will not shine with her customary refulgence.

THE ELECTION IN SPAIN

Since Spain ceased to be a world power, it does not figure very large in the world's news. Its affairs do not vitally affect the world's life. But when a nation exiles its royal family, sets up a popular form of government, and revolutionizes the social and economic order, it makes the front page in the news.

Spain has done this in recent years. But an election was held there last week, and by a large majority the revolutionary government was overthrown, and a radical change was made toward the right.

The leaders who effected the revolution were radicals who believed that women were entitled to the ballot. And the newly-enfranchised women upset the leaders who gave them the ballot. There is nothing surprising in that, and the revolutionary leaders should have known what they were letting themselves in for. Spain is a Catholic country. The women are much more devoted to the church than the men. The revolutionary leaders were rather hard on the church and its leaders. That struck a vital spot in the natures of many of the women.

Experience has shown that democracy works only in countries that have a long heritage of democracy. The Latin countries in the main have no such heritage. Universal suffrage for males has been precarious enough. Then to add the women made the matter all the more precarious,—at least so far as democracy is concerned.

But we suspect that the leaders of the revolution against the Hapsburg rulers have resources left. They can make another revolution, establish another dictatorship, and the women will be out of it again. In a country like Spain, majorities do not count for so much as they do here in democratic America and in democratic England. Having been defeated by the votes of the women, we look for a final defeat for the women unless they fall in with the revolutionary plans of the leaders who exiled their king.

The World's Fair will be repeated next year and we can now sing "God's in His Heaven, all's right with the World's Fair."

ON SINGING IN BANKS

The acting Secretary of the Treasury, Morgenthau, has issued a code of etiquette for Treasury guards. Under the code they are required to refrain from reading the newspaper or books while on assignment; to keep clothes clean, pressed, and coat buttoned; keep cap clean and on straight; keep shoes shined; refrain from smoking and unnecessary conversation while on assignment; not to sit down while on assignment, except where it demands desk work or for temporary relaxation, and appear at inspection.

Morale is undoubtedly kept up better by such requirements, which reminds us that Gilbert K. Chesterton has raised the question: If reapers sing while reaping, why should not auditors sing while auditing and bankers while banking? If there are songs for all the separate things that have to be done in a boat, why are there not songs for all the separate things that have to be done in a bank? . . . It is obvious that there is an indefinable something in the very atmosphere of the society in which we live that makes it spiritually difficult to sing in banks. Mr. Chesterton says that one cannot be a great financier and sing, because the essence of being a great financier is that you keep quiet.

While Mr. Chesterton was toying with the idea of singing in counting houses, he wrote out a few songs suitable for commercial gentlemen. The songs are amusing. The Treasury guards might entertain themselves by composing songs which they could sing if it were the custom to sing around financial circles.

LEADERS OF COUNTRY CHANGE WITH DEPRESSION

Rabbi I. Newman, pastor of Temple Rodeph Sholom, has furnished us a new list of the leaders of the country. He names the following:

Franklin D. Roosevelt; United States Supreme Court Justice Brandeis; Jane Addams, founder of Hull House; Norman Thomas, economist and Socialist; John C. Dewey, philosopher and educator; Eugene O'Neill, dramatist; Sinclair Lewis, novelist and Nobel Prize winner; Edwin Markham, poet; Thomas Hunt Morgan, psychologist and Nobel prize winner; and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, orator, liberal and religious leader.

Then he suggests that Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller and J. P. Morgan have been deflated by the depression. We listened to a discussion by our preacher yesterday on the difference between character and reputation. Before the depression considerable of the real character of men was unknown. The depression has ripped off the covering of many people and caused to be substituted for certain reputations their real selves. They still have a reputation but it has changed. However, they were not changed, but they stood revealed as they were to the world. And it may be even to themselves, for some people do not know what they are really capable of doing or bearing until the testing comes.

Wallace's Program

Milwaukee Journal

Unique as it is in our history to find statesmanship in the Department of Agriculture, it has been found. Secretary Wallace rises to statesmanship in his speech at Muncie, Ind.

Mr. Wallace performs this miracle of departmental Washington by his clear showing that the farm problem is our national problem. It cannot be solved by holiday movements or area strikes at home. It hinges on national policies, definite decisions that must be made and adhered to over a course of years.

Planned agriculture, planned export trade, planned distribution of the national income, but still leaving the citizen free within the plan to work out his destiny—that is the answer of the Secretary of Agriculture to what is wrong with the farm and what is wrong with America. His analysis of the situation cannot be escaped.

Recognizing Its Size

Oakland Tribune

For its size alone, it should have been easy to recognize Russia. The Soviet Union, as the National Geographic Society puts it, is the world's largest continuous country, covering about one-seventh of the land area of the globe. It is second only to the British Empire among the landowners, and its 164,000,000 people probably comprise about one-twelfth of the population of the globe. Some more figures:

"The Soviet Union possesses three times as much territory as the United States, and it stretches across two continents (Europe and Asia) a distance of more than 5000 miles—a round trip from Washington to San Francisco. The Soviet Union of today, however, is smaller than pre-war Russia. Latvia, Esthonia, Lithuania, Finland and parts of Poland, Rumania and Turkey were all carved from the Empire after the close of the World War. The present territory of the U. S. S. R. is about 93 per cent of Tsarist Russia."

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

THE DESERTERS

When autumn winds blow chill and raw
And snowflakes hurry, helter-skelter,
I see the homes of twigs and straw
That once afforded warmth and shelter;
The nests so trim and new in May,
Today are rent and torn and shattered;
Beyond the hill and far away
The tenants of the trees are scattered.

The Jay still hops about the lawn
The while the downy snow is falling,
The crow, before the break of dawn,
From distant fields and woods is calling,
And, feather-muffled to his throat,
However icy be the weather,
The bunting sounds his cheery note.
Through all the morning hours together.

Today I see from where I sit,
Beyond the faded, stricken flowers,
The tree where bluebirds used to sit
And sing through all the morning hou.
But every nest is broken now;
The busy mother birds that darted
So cheerfully from bough to bough
Have spread their pinions and departed.

I fix my eyes across the way
Upon a scene of desolation
And view as twilight dims the day
A weatherbeaten habitation,
Once woven with the magic art
Of thrush or sparrow, finch or linnet,
As lonely as an empty heart,
A nest without a nestling in it.

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and ma said, There's no more doubt about it, Willyum, it's a tried and true certainty, I found the 2nd gray hair in my head today.

My my, who found the ferst one? pop said, and ma said, I did, a few days ago, and my ferst reaction was the optimistic thawt that it must of got in there by mistake, so I'd of dismissed the whole matter with a superficial laugh but when I found another one this afternoon I realized with a thud that I'm really getting gray and I'm already in the ferst warning stages.

Tut tut, or I mite even go ferther and say not at all, pop said. One swallow doesn't make a summer and 2 gray hairs dont make a winter, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum it's no joking matter.

Of course it is, I can make you a half a duzzen jokes on the subjeck while you wait, pop said. For instants, it's a long gray hair that has no terning. Or better still, a gray hair in the head is werth 2 in the butter, he said, and ma said, If that's sippose to be funny excuse me from joining in the generel hilarity.

You mite like that last one more if it was put in the well known A and B form, such as A says to B, My wife claims she found a gray hair today, and B replies, where, in the butter? pop said, and ma said, I like it even werse if possible.

O well, I'm just warming up, they'll get funnier as they go on, pop said. Here's one in the He and She form. She says to He, O my how terrible, I fund a gray hair in my head, and He says, referring to his own bald dome, I'd be sattisfied to find even a pink or a green one in mine. Ha ha, I mite sell that one to a funny paper and buy you a bottle of dye with the proceeds, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum that's enough and it's been enough for some time, and ferthermore you've got to take me to the movies to help me forget my troubles.

Hair hair, I mean hear hear, pop said.

In the Long Ago

From The Register Files 14 Years Ago Today

NOVEMBER 27, 1919

Thanksgiving day was celebrated throughout the community with special services in the churches, and general feasting and rejoicing in the homes, especially those whose sons were welcomed after long absence overseas.

Among events of the holiday, had been the annual Firemen's Thanksgiving ball on the previous night in I. O. O. F. hall, netting a substantial sum for the firemen's relief fund to aid men injured in the pursuit of their duties.

With the completion of a fine twelve-inch well near the Lincoln school ground, and boring under way on a well on the W. A. Greenleaf property on Bristol street, assurance was given that Santa Ana need not face a water shortage during the coming year. The new well on the Greenleaf property was down to the depth of 180 feet.

Thoughts On Modern Life

BY GLENN FRANK

PULMOTOR AND BEEFSTEAK

The other day a band of reporters cornered me in my rooms in a New York hotel and began to ply me with questions about the reaction of the Middle West, from which I hail, to the National Recovery Program of the Roosevelt administration.

I expressed, in the course of the interview, an honest skepticism of any long-time policy based upon a deliberate slowing down of our industrial and agricultural production, insisting that our job is to use our utmost productive capacity to enrich the lives of the millions instead of dismantling a significant part of that capacity. I expressed also an honest fear of any long-time policy of exclusive economic nationalism, insisting that we cannot wall ourselves off from the world without permanently reducing the American standard of living and turning our farmers into a peasant class chained to mere subsistence farming.

The next day I found myself headlined as attacking the farm policies of the Roosevelt administration. The headlines hardly caught my meaning, but neither the reporters nor the writers of the headlines were to blame. I did not, I suppose, make clear in the rush of the interview the distinction between policies that may be sound for the short haul and unsound for the long haul. I want, if I can, to make that distinction now.

When the patient has fainted at our feet, and is in danger of dying, sound sense calls for the pulmotor. Breathing must be restored. That is the first duty. It may be that the patient has been undernourished and will need a beefsteak when he is again conscious and sitting up in bed. But at the moment he needs the pulmotor. The pulmotor will not build him up, but it will save his life. Once he is again breathing and ready to eat, it would be quite as unwise to feed him the pulmotor as it would have been to try to restore his breath with a beefsteak.

The domestic allotment scheme of reducing agricultural production with government checks paying the farmer for not producing is, I think,a justifiable use of the pulmotor on a dying industry. But it is a pulmotor. It is not the beefsteak of normal and healthy production and distribution.

Our Children

By Angelo Patri

PARENT AND TEACHER

"I want you to give my daughter another teacher."

"What's wrong with the teacher?"

"She's just a young girl who doesn't know her knee from her elbow but she thinks she knows it all and tells me what I'm to do with my own child. I'm not going to stand for it and I want you to give my daughter another teacher tomorrow morning. If you don't I'll see about it."

"We don't like to change children from class to class unless we have a very good reason. What is wrong with the teacher? What did she do?

"She won't let my daughter leave the room when she needs to. Now what do you think about that? And when I write her a note and tell her she must let her go she pays no attention and keeps her in just the same. And I'm not going to stand for it."

"Did you see the teacher?"

"No. I'm not going to waste any time on her. I wrote her a note and she wasn't lady enough to answer me and she kept the child in just the same."

"We'll ask her to come in and see what she says about it."

"All right, if it pleases you, but I've made up my mind and I won't stand for it."

"Ah, Miss Bella. Mrs. Cloverbloom says you won't let Ida leave the room even though she has sent you a note about it."

"That is a mistake. Ida has left the room exactly once every half hour today. Just before the dismissal bell sounded she raised her hand and asked to leave the room and I told her to get her things together and pass out on line. Ten times in one school day is enough for any child to leave the room and I have written a note to her mother asking her to take her to the doctor."

"You are going to stand there and tell me that my child left the room ten times today when she told me, just now, that you wouldn't let her leave the room. I'm not going to stand for this."

"I'm standing by the record. Any child who needs to leave the room that number of times ought to be in a hospital, not in a school, and if she begins this again tomorrow she's going home for medical attention. I'm not going to stand for this either."

"Thanks, thanks very much, Miss Bella. I won't keep you another minute. Now Mrs. Cloverbloom, suppose you come in tomorrow morning some time that is convenient to you, and we'll arrange about this. If the child is ill,——"

"Ill? There isn't a thing the matter with her but monkey business. She needs a good firm hand over her. If the teacher would sit on her she's soon stop this nonsense. That teacher doesn't know her business. You tell her for me——"

"Yes. I'll tell her that you want her to see that Ida gets down to business. We'll attend to it, Mrs. Cloverbloom. Thanks very much. Not at all. We'll attend to it."

(Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.)

If the people of San Jose and California had been impressed, during these past days, by the activity of officials everywhere, that there was the deepest conviction in the minds of our peace officials that law should be upheld at all hazards, and that the guilty must and shall be punished, there would have been, to a degree, a consciousness that they could let the law and the officers take their course. But the mob knew their officers. They judged there was a flabbiness about their official backbone, and the action of the officers showed that the mob was right.

The sheriff had begged the governor for the state militia, but the Governor did not propose to protect the kidnapers by the army of the state. The sheriff had many deputies. They were well-armed. There is no question but that the sheriff could have brought the crowd to bay if they knew that he was determined to protect the jail by the guns if need be. But the mob seemed to know that there was no fear from that source.

According to the dispatches they were led by a 17-year-old boy with a crowbar. They were met with tear gas bombs. They entered the jail where the sheriff and the deputies had machine guns for the protection of the prisoners. If anyone doubts but that by a determined action the sheriff and his men could have prevented that mob from going further, in our judgment they do not know the nature of the mob.

But the very causes which aroused in the mob the thought that they probably would have to depend upon their own efforts to have justice meted out, were the same ones that caused the officials to fail in their hour of supreme test. The problem of the rape of the law by the kidnapers and murderers will never be solved by a mob of lynchers at a jail door. Our emotional nature may be stirred to executing such action. But civilization is not progressing along that route.

California has been injured. When the dispassionate judgement of the nation is upon this act, and upon the action of our officers and our Governor also, we are afraid that California will not shine with her customary refulgence.

THE ELECTION IN SPAIN

Since Spain ceased to be a world power, it does not figure very large in the world's news. Its affairs do not vitally affect the world's life. But when a nation exiles its royal family, sets up a popular form of government, and revolutionizes the social and economic order, it makes the front page in the news.

Spain has done this in recent years. But an election was held there last week, and by a large majority the revolutionary government was overthrown, and a radical change was made toward the right.

The leaders who effected the revolution were radicals who believed that women were entitled to the ballot. And the newly-enfranchised women upset the leaders who gave them the ballot. There is nothing surprising in that, and the revolutionary leaders should have known what they were letting themselves in for. Spain is a Catholic country. The women are much more devoted to the church than the men. The revolutionary leaders were rather hard on the church and its leaders. That struck a vital spot in the natures of many of the women.

Experience has shown that democracy works only in countries that have a long heritage of democracy. The Latin countries in the main have no such heritage. Universal suffrage for males has been precarious enough. Then to add the women made the matter all the more precarious,—at least so far as democracy is concerned.

But we suspect that the leaders of the revolution against the Hapsburg rulers have resources left. They can make another revolution, establish another dictatorship, and the women will be out of it again. In a country like Spain, majorities do not count for so much as they do here in democratic America and in democratic England. Having been defeated by the votes of the women, we look for a final defeat for the women unless they fall in with the revolutionary plans of the leaders who exiled their king.

The World's Fair will be repeated next year and we can now sing "God's in His Heaven, all's right with the World's Fair."

ON SINGING IN BANKS

The acting Secretary of the Treasury, Morgenthau, has issued a code of etiquette for Treasury guards. Under the code they are required to refrain from reading the newspaper or books while on assignment; to keep clothes clean, pressed, and coat buttoned; keep cap clean and on straight; keep shoes shined; refrain from smoking and unnecessary conversation while on assignment; not to sit down while on assignment, except where it demands desk work or for temporary relaxation, and appear at inspection.

Morale is undoubtedly kept up better by such requirements, which reminds us that Gilbert K. Chesterton has raised the question: If reapers sing while reaping, why should not auditors sing while auditing and bankers while banking? If there are songs for all the separate things that have to be done in a boat, why are there not songs for all the separate things that have to be done in a bank? . . . It is obvious that there is an indefinable something in the very atmosphere of the society in which we live that makes it spiritually difficult to sing in banks. Mr. Chesterton says that one cannot be a great financier and sing, because the essence of being a great financier is that you keep quiet.

While Mr. Chesterton was toying with the idea of singing in counting houses, he wrote out a few songs suitable for commercial gentlemen. The songs are amusing. The Treasury guards might entertain themselves by composing songs which they could sing if it were the custom to sing around financial circles.

LEADERS OF COUNTRY CHANGE WITH DEPRESSION

Rabbi I. Newman, pastor of Temple Rodeph Sholom, has furnished us a new list of the leaders of the country. He names the following:

Franklin D. Roosevelt; United States Supreme Court Justice Brandeis; Jane Addams, founder of Hull House; Norman Thomas, economist and Socialist; John C. Dewey, philosopher and educator; Eugene O'Neill, dramatist; Sinclair Lewis, novelist and Nobel Prize winner; Edwin Markham, poet; Thomas Hunt Morgan, psychologist and Nobel prize winner; and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, orator, liberal and religious leader.

Then he suggests that Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller and J. P. Morgan have been deflated by the depression. We listened to a discussion by our preacher yesterday on the difference between character and reputation. Before the depression considerable of the real character of men was unknown. The depression has ripped off the covering of many people and caused to be substituted for certain reputations their real selves. They still have a reputation but it has changed. However, they were not changed, but they stood revealed as they were to the world. And it may be even to themselves, for some people do not know what they are really capable of doing or bearing until the testing comes.

Wallace's Program

Milwaukee Journal

Unique as it is in our history to find statesmanship in the Department of Agriculture, it has been found. Secretary Wallace rises to statesmanship in his speech at Muncie, Ind.

Mr. Wallace performs this miracle of departmental Washington by his clear showing that the farm problem is our national problem. It cannot be solved by holiday movements or area strikes at home. It hinges on national policies, definite decisions that must be made and adhered to over a course of years.

Planned agriculture, planned export trade, planned distribution of the national income, but still leaving the citizen free within the plan to work out his destiny—that is the answer of the Secretary of Agriculture to what is wrong with the farm and what is wrong with America. His analysis of the situation cannot be escaped.

Recognizing Its Size

Oakland Tribune

For its size alone, it should have been easy to recognize Russia. The Soviet Union, as the National Geographic Society puts it, is the world's largest continuous country, covering about one-seventh of the land area of the globe. It is second only to the British Empire among the landowners, and its 164,000,000 people probably comprise about one-twelfth of the population of the globe. Some more figures:

"The Soviet Union possesses three times as much territory as the United States, and it stretches across two continents (Europe and Asia) a distance of more than 5000 miles—a round trip from Washington to San Francisco. The Soviet Union of today, however, is smaller than pre-war Russia. Latvia, Esthonia, Lithuania, Finland and parts of Poland, Rumania and Turkey were all carved from the Empire after the close of the World War. The present territory of the U. S. S. R. is about 93 per cent of Tsarist Russia."

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

THE DESERTERS

When autumn winds blow chill and raw
And snowflakes hurry, helter-skelter,
I see the homes of twigs and straw
That once afforded warmth and shelter;
The nests so trim and new in May,
Today are rent and torn and shattered;
Beyond the hill and far away
The tenants of the trees are scattered.

The Jay still hops about the lawn
The while the downy snow is falling,
The crow, before the break of dawn,
From distant fields and woods is calling,
And, feather-muffled to his throat,
However icy be the weather,
The bunting sounds his cheery note
Through all the morning hours together.

Today I see from where I sit,
Beyond the faded, stricken flowers,
The tree where bluebirds used to sit
And sing through all the morning hou
But every nest is broken now;
The busy mother birds that darted
So cheerfully from bough to bough
Have spread their pinions and departed.

I fix my eyes across the way
Upon a scene of desolation
And view as twilight dims the day
A weatherbeaten habitation,
Once woven with the magic art
Of thrush or sparrow, finch or linnet,
As lonely as an empty heart,

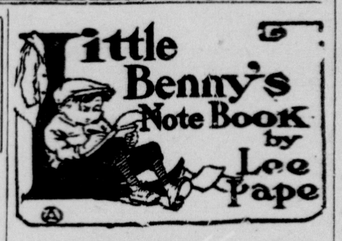
Little Benny's Note Book by Lee Pape



Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and ma said, There's no more doubt about it, Willyum, it's a tried and true certainty, I found the 2nd gray hair in my head today.

My my, who found the ferst one? pop said, and ma said, I did, a few days ago, and my ferst reaction was the optimistic thawt that it must of got in there by mistake, so I'd of dismissed the whole matter with a superficial laugh but when I found another one this afternoon I realized with a thud that I'm really getting gray and I'm already in the ferst warning stages.

Tut tut, or I mite even go ferther and say not at all, pop said. One swallow doesn't make a summer and 2 gray hairs dont make a winter, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum it's no joking matter.

Of course it is, I can make you a half a duzzen jokes on the subjeck while you wait, pop said. For instants, it's a long gray hair that has no terning. Or better still, a gray hair in the head is werth 2 in the butter, he said, and ma said, If that's sippose to be funny excuse me from joining in the generel hilarity.

You mite like that last one more if it was put in the well known A and B form, such as A says to B, My wife claims she found a gray hair today, and B replies, where, in the butter? pop said, and ma said, I like it even werse if possible.

O well, I'm just warming up, they'll get funnier as they go on, pop said. Here's one in the He and She form. She says to He, O my how terrible, I fund a gray hair in my head, and He says, referring to his own bald dome, I'd be sattisfied to find even a pink or a green one in mine. Ha ha, I mite sell that one to a funny paper and buy you a bottle of dye with the proceeds, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum that's enough and it's been enough for some time, and ferthermore you've got to take me to the movies to help me forget my troubles.

Hair hair, I mean hear hear, pop said.

Being the last one before they left for the movies.

In the Long Ago

From The Register Files
14 Years Ago Today

NOVEMBER 27, 1919

Thanksgiving day was celebrated throughout the community with special services in the churches, and general feasting and rejoicing in the homes, especially those whose sons were welcomed after long absence overseas.

Among events of the holiday, had been the annual Firemen's Thanksgiving ball on the previous night in I. O. O. F. hall, netting a substantial sum for the firemen's relief fund to aid men injured in the pursuit of their duties.

With the completion of a fine twelve-inch well near the Lincoln school ground, and boring under way on a well on the W. A. Greenleaf property on Bristol street, assurance was given that Santa Ana need not face a water shortage during the coming year. The new well on the Greenleaf property was down to the depth of 180 feet.

Thoughts On Modern Life

BY GLENN FRANK

PULMOTOR AND BEEFSTEAK

The other day a band of reporters cornered me in my rooms in a New York hotel and began to ply me with questions about the reaction of the Middle West, from which I hail, to the National Recovery Program of the Roosevelt administration.

I expressed, in the course of the interview, an honest skepticism of any long-time policy based upon a deliberate slowing down of our industrial and agricultural production, insisting that our job is to use our utmost productive capacity to enrich the lives of the millions instead of dismantling a significant part of that capacity. I expressed also an honest fear of any long-time policy of exclusive economic nationalism, insisting that we cannot wall ourselves off from the world without permanently reducing the American standard of living and turning our farmers into a peasant class chained to mere subsistence farming.

The next day I found myself headlined as attacking the farm policies of the Roosevelt administration. The headlines hardly caught my meaning, but neither the reporters nor the writers of the headlines were to blame. I did not, I suppose, make clear in the rush of the interview the distinction between policies that may be sound for the short haul and unsound for the long haul. I want, if I can, to make that distinction now.

When the patient has fainted at our feet, and is in danger of dying, sound sense calls for the pulmotor. Breathing must be restored. That is the first duty. It may be that the patient has been undernourished and will need a beefsteak when he is again conscious and sitting up in bed. But at the moment he needs the pulmotor. The pulmotor will not build him up, but it will save his life. Once he is again breathing and ready to eat, it would be quite as unwise to feed him the pulmotor as it would have been to try to restore his breath with a beefsteak.

The domestic allotment scheme of reducing agricultural production with government checks paying the farmer for not producing is, I think, a justifiable use of the pulmotor on a dying industry. But it is a pulmotor. It is not the beefsteak of normal and healthy production and distribution.

Our Children

By Angelo Patri

PARENT AND TEACHER

"I want you to give my daughter another teacher."

"What's wrong with the teacher?"

"She's just a young girl who doesn't know her knee from her elbow but she thinks she knows it all and tells me what I'm to do with my own child. I'm not going to stand for it and I want you to give my daughter another teacher tomorrow morning. If you don't I'll see about it."

"We don't like to change children from class to class unless we have a very good reason. What is wrong with the teacher? What did she do?

"She won't let my daughter leave the room when she needs to. Now what do you think about that? And when I write her a note and tell her she must let her go she pays no attention and keeps her in just the same. And I'm not going to stand for it."

"Did you see the teacher?"

"No. I'm not going to waste any time on her. I wrote her a note and she wasn't lady enough to answer me and she kept the child in just the same."

"We'll ask her to come in and see what she says about it."

"All right, if it pleases you, but I've made up my mind and I won't stand for it."

"Ah, Miss Bella. Mrs. Cloverbloom says you won't let Ida leave the room even though she has sent you a note about it."

"That is a mistake. Ida has left the room exactly once every half hour today. Just before the dismissal bell sounded she raised her hand and asked to leave the room and I told her to get her things together and pass out on line. Ten times in one school day is enough for any child to leave the room and I have written a note to her mother asking her to take her to the doctor."

"You are going to stand there and tell me that my child left the room ten times today when she told me, just now, that you wouldn't let her leave the room. I'm not going to stand for this."

"I'm standing by the record. Any child who needs to leave the room that number of times ought to be in a hospital, not in a school, and if she begins this again tomorrow she's going home for medical attention. I'm not going to stand for this either."

"Thanks, thanks very much, Miss Bella. I won't keep you another minute. Now Mrs. Cloverbloom, suppose you come in tomorrow morning some time that is convenient to you, and we'll arrange about this. If the child is ill,——"

"Ill? There isn't a thing the matter with her but monkey business. She needs a good firm hand over her. If the teacher would sit on her she's soon stop this nonsense. That teacher doesn't know her business. You tell her for me——"

"Yes. I'll tell her that you want her to see that Ida gets down to business. We'll attend to it, Mrs. Cloverbloom. Thanks very much. Not at all. We'll attend to it."
